KINGSTON'S OVATION TO CHARLES E. HUGHES

RONDOUT'S WELCOME TO JUDGE HUGHES

Whistles of River Craft and Shore Shops Tooted Welcome to Hughes Who Was Visibly Affected by Cordialty of Greeting---Rhinebeck Republican Hold-up.

Charles Evans Hughes came back to the scenes of his boyhood in Ulster county this morning to the accompaniment of a terrific din of steam whistles, automobile horns and cheers mingled with the strains of the Saugerties brass band which greeted the ferryboat Transport carrying the candidate and his party, with the reception committee, from the time she entered the creek channel to the arrival at the slip. An enthusiastic, yelling mob of people jammed into the ferry shed and lined the Strand and adjacent streets. Nearly 100 automobiles were in waiting all decorated with American flages of various sizes, and fell into line behind the machines occupied by the Hughes party and formed a triumphal escort up Broadway and to the opera house.

It was a reception so cordial and so spontaneous as to leave no doubt in the minds of any as to the sincerity of the feeling on the part of Ulster county folk for a descendant of one of its old families, a man whose public service has not been limited to his native state but has benefited every state in the union. Flying flags, waving caps, hats and handkerchiefs were in evidence on all sides indications of the friendly spirit of the thousands of people who were distributed all along the line of the automobile parade.

Had it not been for the manifest anxiety of thousands to hear the candidate, an even greater crowd would have been on hand to greet him Owners of automobiles, in many cases, feared that they would lose the opportunity of hearing Hughes and for that reason the automobile parade was not so long as expected. Their fears were well grounded, for the opera house was filled an hour before Judge Hughes arrived there.

The unmistakable sincerity of the welcome was most affecting to the candidate who was kept bowing in acknowledgement of salutes as he stood on the deck of the ferryboat. It was merely a repetition of the receptions which have greeted Hughes on his recent tour through Indiana, Ohio and in this, his closing swing through the Empire State.

Rhinecliff Demands a Speech.

At Rhinecliff the station platform was crowded for a full half hour before the special train pulled in. President Crosby of the Republican Club of Rhinebeck had secured a fife and drum corps to play just for the few moments that Mr Hughes was in the station. The villagers insisted on hearing the candidate and Mr. Hughes obliged them with a few words expressive of his position in this campaign and he was cheered again and again.

And Gets It.

Briefly, Mr. Hughes expressed his appreciation of the cordial reception tendered him and said in part:

"It seems as if it were only a few days ago that I was a boy over across the river there and looking out from under the trees in my grandfather's orchard over the Hudson and to this shore, one of the most beautiful scenes presented anywhere in this country."

Continuing, Mr. Hughes made a slight reference to his purpose in the event of election, namely, to put prosperity on a sound basis. He referred to the war and the effect on this country of the restoration of peace when these men will go back to work well-organized, alert and ready to produce on a scale never before attempted.

That is when we must protect American labor, he declared, and he emphasized to his hearers his position in favor of justice to labor in the matter of hours, wages and improved working conditions.

"I want American labor to be protected, to work under the best conditions and to earn the best wages with prosperity on a firm basis and I don't want free soup houses and the bread lines which were in this country 22 months ago."

Applause greeted Mr. Hughes's conclusion and his expression of regret at the condition of his voice was drowned in the racket raised by the crowd. The party then proceeded to the automobiles in waiting and was taken down to the ferry landing.

That Mr. Hughes was pleased with his reception in Rhinebeck and with the screeching greetings whistled by passing river craft was in no time at doubt. He walked about on deck, mingling with members of his party and, when not busy in acknowledging salutes, chatted with animation with relatives and friends.

Among those greeting Mr. Hughes were his cousins, Dr. W. H. Connelly, Attorney Arthur C. Connelly and Henry C. Connelly, and on board were: John D Schoonmaker, State Committeeman Philip Elting, Martin Cantine of Saugerties, Judge A. T. Clearwater, Congressman Charles B. Ward, State Committeeman McGibbon of Sullivan county, Edward Cookendall, former Congressman Frank LeFevre Mayor Canfield and others.

As the ferryboat came into the slip pandemonium broke loose with cheers, cat calls and cries of "Hughes, Hughes". The Saugerties band, which headed the procession on a big motor truck, then struck up and the machine carrying Mr. Hughes and his party followed with the remaining automobiles falling into line behind.

HUGHES FINISHING 28,000 MILES TRIP

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Charles Evans Hughes is sweeping down the Hudson today on the home stretch of the 1916 campaign feeling as confident of his election as if the votes were already counted and the tally announced in his favor. His last tour through Ohio, Indiana and New York state, regarded as the pivotal states, has convinced him, he says, that his success is not to be doubted.

Mr. Hughes left on his special train at 8:15 this morning. This will be his last day on the road and it is scheduled to be a strenuous one. He will make six or seven speeches along the Hudson river, winding up tonight with several talks to Brooklyn voters. Hudson, Kingston, Poughkeepsie, Beacon and Yonkers constituted the list of towns on his speaking schedule up-state.

When Mr Hughes reaches New York tonight he will have campaigned approximately 28,000 miles since the campaign started. He has made mre than 500 speeches in thirty-three states. He will deliver several addresses Saturday afternoon and evening in New York city, and then will settle down at the Hotel Astor to await the result Tuesday.

The burial of the hatchet by Mr. Hughes and William Barnes last night at Albany is believed by Republican leaders on the Hughes special to have put the finishing touch on cinching upper New York state for the Republican nominee. Its effect nationally on the Progressives was admitted to be open to doubt, but they were happy in the belief that it had safely secured New York's 45 electoral votes for Hughes.

CIVIL WAR HAS BEGUN IN GREECE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Nov. 3.—Civil war has broken out in Greece. Heavy fighting is in progress between Venizelist revolutionary forces and loyalist troops in Thessaly. The rebel army that occupied Katorina is reported to be marching on Larissa, the great railroad center in Thessaly.

Despatches from Athens today state that King Constantine is taking military measures for the protection of the Greek capital.

(Katorina is an important city on the Gulf of Salonika, 45 miles southwest of Salonika. It is the same distance from Larissa. Larissa is 130 miles north of Athens and is connected with Athens by the main railway in Greece).

The Venizelist army, which numbers 30,000, is well equipped. It was supplied with arms and ammunition by the Allies to be used against Bulgaria.

London newspapers today bitterly criticize the Allied military authorities in Greece for allowing King Constantine to send troops over the Piraeus-Larissa railway to reinforce the loyalist forces fighting the rebels in Thessaly. It was pointed out that this railway line has already been taken over by the Allies for their exclusive use.

Athens, Via Paris, Nov. 3.—The revolutionary situation has grown so acute in Greece that soldiers have been placed at the disposal of the German embassy. An armed guard now surrounds the building.

Fast Train Ditched.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Moline, Ill., Nov. 3.—A fast Chicago to Kansas City train on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad went in the ditch near here today, killing the engineer and injuring some passengers. The exact number of injured is unknown. They are being taken to Kansas City.

Dance for Charity.

A charity dance will be held Sunday evening, November 12, by the Benevolent Daughters of Jacob, at the Hebrew School on Post street. Maisenheider's orchestra will furnish music for the occasion and it is hoped a large attendance will be present. A small admission will be charged.

WAR AT A GLANCE

Allied armies are on the offensive in all the theatres of war.

After a lapse of weeks war interest has again shifted to the Italian arena of operations, where the Italians have won a notable success in the renewal of their drive on Trieste.

Southeast of Gorizia the Austro-Hungarian positions have been pierced at several points, the Italians advancing more than a mile. In the battles, which began on Wednesday the Austro-Hungarians have lost 20,000 men in killed, wounded and captured, it is unofficially estimated.

Fighting of the utmost violence is still proceeding in that sphere with the Austro-Hungarians struggling desperately to hold fortified mountain heights defending Trieste.

On the western front the French have not only reoccupied Fort Vaux, northeast of Verdun, but have recaptured part of the Village of Sailly-Saillisel, on the Somme front, that had been lost to the Germans.

The Russians are attacking furiously on the eastern front. The German war office announces the repulse of seven assaults at one point in Galicia.

In Macedonia the British continue their attacks against the Bulgarians and have captured another town on the Struma river front. The Servians on the Tcherna river are giving the German-Bulgar armies no rest.

Both the Germans and the Roumanians claim fresh progress in the Roumanian theatre.

Arrested For Blackmail.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 3.—J. J. Klein, a wealthy Baltimore banker, caused the arrest today of George Bush, an actor of this city, on a charge of obtaining $18,000 in cash by blackmail. It is claimed Bush and two companions surprised and held up Klein in an Atlantic City Hotel in the presence of a woman. The complaint names Ed Donahue, now under arrest, as one of Bush's companions. The three impersonated federal officers, it is charged.

New Orleans, La., Nov. 3.—Sir Ernest Shackleton, the explorer, arrived here today aboard the United Fruit steamer Parisima.

PARRAL CAPTURED BY VILLA'S TROOPS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Juarez, Mex., Nov. 3, via El Paso, Tex.—Villa has captured Parral and the entire Carranzista garrison, numbering over 2,000, has enlisted under his leadership, according to refugees reaching here early today from Chihuahua City.

General Herrera, the Parral commandant, and several officers, were executed by Villa, the refugees stated.

News of the fate of nine Americans known to have been in Parral is anxiously awaited here. It is feared that they may have been killed in fulfillment of Villa's reported vow to shoot all Americans on whom he can lay his hands.

Torreon, it is believed, will be the next objective of the Villistas.

The train which brought the refugees here is the first to arrive from Chihuahua since Monday, when Villistas tore up tracks and burned bridges on the railroad between here and there The railroad has been repaired but 400 Villistas under General Salazar are operating along the line and attacks upon other trains which may be coming here are feared.

Carranzista soldiers in large numbers are protecting all passenger trains to prevent repetition of the hold-up of Monday when twenty-nine soldiers were killed and all the passengers lined up and robbed. Two troop trains preceded the passenger today. No Villistas were seen on the way.

Guerrilla fighting is taking place daily north of Chihuahua, the refugees said. They declare that the plight of the city is desperate, that food is badly needed and that the inhabitants who have been compelled to remain behind are in a state of panic because of the belief that Villa may return at any time.

The Sanitarium Auxiliary.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Sanitarium was held at the Sanitarium on Wednesday afternoon. There was a great deal of discussion of plans for new work in which much interest was shown and some new members were reported. A report was given on Donation Day and the auxiliary as well as the sisters in charge of the Sanitarium wish to publicly thank all those individuals and organizations who so kindly and generously contributed to Donation Day of 1916.

HUGHES PRESENTS ISSUES OF CAMPAIGN

Kingston Opera House Could Not Hold a Fifth of the Crowd That Wanted to Hear the Speech--Candidate Greeted by Enthusiastic Audience -- Overflow Meeting Held.

Firm in its belief in Charles E Hughes and anxious to let him know what he may expect from Ulster county on election day, Ulster county turned out a crowd of nearly ten thousand people to see Hughes this morning.

Only about fifteen hundred people heard him. They filled the Kingston opera house to its capacity, until the doors were closed by the police and fire department officials for safety. Mr. Hughes was unable to make an open air speech, which is not permitted by the physicians who are attending him, but an overflow meeting of more than three thousand people was addressed from in front of the Stuyvesant hotel by Judge William D. Cunningham of Ellenville, who aroused enthusiasm to so high a pitch that the cheers of the crowd outside could be heard inside the opera house while Mr. Hughes was talking.

The demonstration was the finest tribute that Ulster county ever has paid to any man, but it was what Ulster county expected to do, what everybody who has followed the response which Ulster county always has done in the past when Hughes

C Connelly, who was Mr. Hughes's uncle, also occupied seats on the stage. Both on the stage and in the auditorium of the opera house there were many women, who were just as vociferous in their applause for the Republican candidate as were the men.

Immediately on his arrival at the opera house Mr. Hughes and the members of his party were escorted to the stage, and his appearance created such enthusiasm among the fifteen hundred people who filled the theater that the music of the band, which began playing at the close of Judge Cunningham's speech, was drowned out.

Mr. Klock in a few words introduced Mr. Hughes, who was compelled to wait for several minutes for the pplause to subside before he could proceed.

Hughes Gratified to Come Back Home

"I have had many experiences in the past week," said Mr. Hughes, and have been visiting among people and in sections of the country with which there are many pleasant associations, but I am particularly gratified to have the opportunity to come back home to Kingston—my mother's home—where I spent so many happy boyhood days. You will pardon me if I say I feel particularly identified with Kingston, address you as acquaintances and friends on what I believe are the important questions now this country.

"We are taking counsel today among ourselves as citizens with respect to the needs and opportunities of the United States I do not desire to speak in a narrow and restricted sense, because all our citizens are deeply interested in our prosperity and prosperity is quite as important to the Democratic citizen as it is to the Republicans. (Applause).

"We wish in the first place to take a comprehensive view of our country and its present condition, looking forward to the comprehensive needs of the future for all of our people, and I propose first that we safeguard American rights as to lives and property alike to the citizens of American whether they be here or abroad, on land or sea.

"We are concerned with a lasting peace but we cannot achieve such a peace except through self respect and the means to support it, by the courageous spirit that founded this nation and preserved it when we were called on fifty years ago. We must have a nation that understands its rights and has the courage unflinchingly to maintain them. (Applause.)

"We must have that peace which finds security in self-respect, and we cannot have self-respect among ourselves unless we have the respect and esteem of every other nation. (Applause.) In no period in our national history has it been easier to maintain that peace because there is no nation that desires to differ seriously with the United States or to become embroiled with us on account of the resources and the ability which we are known to possess. There never has been a period in our history when it was easier to keep peace with the United States.

"We must have a contented people. By that I do not mean a self-satisfied people whose contentment comes through inconsistency, neither do we want to be meddlesome. We have an illustration on our border of the wrong way to attempt to preserve peace. It has not been a question whether Huerta should have been recognized; the question has not been with respect to the mere recognition or non-recognition of Huerta. I have said and I insist that that was entirely a matter for executive judgment, and the matter for the executive to decide was whether as a matter of fact, from the facts that were then known, he had a stable government which was in a position to discharge its international duties and obligations, whether there was a government recognized by other nations, which was the only semblance of a government that Mexico had: the executive was entirely within its rights in deciding what judgment dictated, but it had no right to destroy the only stable government Mexico had and attempt to put another government in its place, with revolution, and leaving to the vagaries of revolution a country unable to deal with revolution."

This government, said Mr. Hughes, was not content with refusal to recognise an existing government, but it prosecuted a personal and vindictive warfare on the unrecognized ruler. This was not a policy of peace. If we are to have a policy of peace, it

Crowd Arrived Early.

The size of the crowd made it necessary to open the doors of the opera house half an hour ahead of schedule time, and to open the meeting fifteen minutes earlier than the announced time. By that time the police and fire departments had found it necessary to put a stop-admittance order on the theater, whose seats were all occupied, and whose aisles were crowded. The stage, where accommodations had been made for seating two hundred people, was also by that time crowded except for the seats reserved for the members of the Hughes party, who arrived at ten minutes past 11 o'clock.

J. E. Klock presided and opened the meeting at 10:15 o'clock and introduced the two speakers—Judge Cunningham, who spoke for fifty minutes until the arrival of Mr. Hughes, and then introduced Mr. Hughes on his arrival Mr. Klock's introduction of Judge Cunningham as a man whom the county of Ulster had delighted to honor in the past and never had regretted the honors conferred on him was met with the first enthusiastic outburst of the day.

Judge Cunningham first discussed the state issues, comparing the results accomplished during the past two years and the lack of accomplishment under the three Democratic governors who preceded Govern Whitman. Up to the present time, he said, Judge Seabury had refrained from making any such comparisons, and the reason was not hard to guess. Judge Cunningham then took up national issues, and in discussing both state and national questions he punctuated his points with stories that were most appropriate.

By 10:30 o'clock the crowd on Fair and John street had begun to be impatient and made demonstrations that indicated a desire to have a speech there. The arrangements for receiving Mr. Hughes and his party made it impracticable to hold an out of door meeting at once, but by the time Mr. Hughes arrived at the theater the crowd outside had grown to 3,500 people, whose clamorous demand for a speech was met by Judge Cunningham, whose appearance was greeted with enthusiastic applause and cheers. He spoke from the automobile of Congressman Charles B. Ward in front of The Stuyvesant.

Mr. Hughes's only aunt, Mrs. Alfred Van Nostrand, of this city, occupied a seat of honor on the stage. She was accompanied by a woman friend and members of the family of the late Senator Henry

NIGHT SCHOOLS TO AID NEW CITIZENS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The Bureau of Naturalization of the U. S. Department of Labor is sending out calls for mass meetings to be held throughout the country in every city and town whose population includes the foreign born. The time for each mass meeting is to be determined locally by the proper authorities when arrangements are completed.

The Bureau of Naturalization of the United States Department of Labor has during the past two and one-half years proposed four events great in administrative governmental activities:

The first was the securing of the co-operation of the public schools of the United States with that bureau in citizenship preparedness.

The second, the proposal to the City of Philadelphia to hold the citizenship reception at which the president spoke, on May 10, 1915.

The third, the holding of a Citizenship Convention in Washington composed of delegates from the public schools working in co-operation with that bureau for the elevation of the standard of American citizenship.

The fourth proposal from this progressive governmental bureau is to call a mass meeting of citizens and prospective citizens, including the actual candidates for citizenship and the non-candidates from the foreign-born residents of each community in the United States. These mass meetings are, primarily, for the purpose of getting the candidates for citizenship into the night school classes maintained by the public schools, in co-operation with the Bureau of Naturalization, for their benefit.

Working in close co-operation with the Bureau of Naturalization of the U. S. Department of Labor, the public school authorities of the United States have provided the means whereby the adult alien population may learn to speak, read and write the English language and obtain a knowledge of American institutions and government. The results thus far have been most far reaching in their influence upon the public mind. The necessity for these citizenship classes has been seen in every city with a foreign community and demonstrated by their organization in every state of the Union. The advantage to the community is realized but the alien friend does not understand what they mean to him. It is to bring the benefits clearly to their minds that these mass meetings have been called by the Naturalization Bureau. It is essential that the attendance upon these night classes be materially increased in all sections of the country. This, it is confidently believed, can be accomplished through a mass meeting for adult foreigners to be held in every city in conjunction with the city authorities and public spirited citizens generally, at which time the benefits to be derived through a course of study at the night schools may be clearly and forcibly placed before the foreign born.

Moreover, these mass meetings have for their objective the elevation of the standard of American citizenship in the eyes of the public representing the resident alien body, citizens by birth, the school authorities and the judiciary. The courts of the United States stand ready to recognize any elevation of the standard of qualifications for admission to citizenship when those qualifications have been demonstrated as possible of attainments by the public schools locally.

To insure the sucess of this nation-wide movement for the betterment of civic conditions, the Bureau of Naturalization has asked the co-operation of the various commercial, labor, patriotic and other organizations, together with the superintendents of schools, civil authorities, clerks of naturalization courts, and officials of the local foreign or racial associations. The Federal authorities of the Department of Labor believe that the time is ripe to strike an effective blow at illiteracy and incompetency by stimulating the interest of employers and employes, foreign and native born, men, women and children in the great national problem of alien instruction and citizenship preparedness.

These mass meetings will permit of a full and free discussion of the vital points involved. The facilities afforded by the local public schools can be made known to the resident foreign-born and action taken to insure their attendance upon the night classes provided for their benefit.

There are approximately sixteen and one-half million foreign-born residents in this country, of which only about three and a half million have been naturalized, according to the last census and subsequent immigration figures. The remaining millions, although a vital part of the nation, have not been admitted to the body politic and are ignorant of the duties and callous to the responsibilities of citizenship. It is only through education that this vast army of foreign friends can become Americanized, and to this end the Federal Government and the public school authorities of the United States have joined forces.

In addition to this, however, and working in complete harmony with it, is the patriotism which inspires concerted effort in behalf of those millions of foreigners now ignorant of American life and ideals and unenlightened as to the privileges and responsibilities which citizenship would confer.

DATES AND FIGS.

Chopped dates or figs, mixed with chopped nuts and a little cream, make fine sandwich filling.

Fig Custard.—Wash a pound of figs and stew for an hour in water to cover; add to the juice a few strips of the peel of a lemon; make a custard of a quart of milk, four eggs, a half cupful of sugar, reserving one white for a meringue. Put two spoonfuls of the figs in each cup, fill with the custard, cover with a meringue and cook in hot water until the custard is thick.

Date Pie.—Wash a pound of dates and heat them in a quart of milk; when soft, stir in a beaten egg after rubbing the dates through a sieve, then pour into a baked pastry shell; add sugar if needed, and cover with sweetened whipped cream. Serve cold.

Dates are rich in nutrients and not too expensive to make good desserts for a light meal.

Fig Loaf Cake.—Take two cupfuls of chopped figs, two cupfuls of sugar, a half cupful of butter, one cupful of milk, four cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, four eggs. Cream the butter, all the sugar, the flour sifted with the baking powder alternating with the milk, until all of both is used; the yolks of the eggs may be added to the sugar while creaming, but the whites should be folded in the very last, using care to keep in all the air. Do all the beating and mixing before adding the egg whites. A fine-grained cake is made so by the hard beating it gets before the eggs are folded in. The figs are cut fine, mixed with a little of the flour and stirred in just before the whites are added.

Date Macaroons.—Beat five egg whites until stiff, fold in a half pound of powdered sugar, a cupful of chopped dates, a half cupful of chopped nuts, and a half cupful of grated coconut. Beat until stiff and roll in balls.

Dates added to brown bread or used as filling, finely chopped, added to boiled frosting, with a few nuts, is most delicious.

A Girl Called Davy

By ELEANOR MARSH

Mandy Carpenter, daughter of Deacon Carpenter, who owned a fine farm on the Hilton road, was noted for her ability to bring to his knees any young man upon whom she chose to apply her powers of fascination. Mandy claimed that she did not exercise any such powers, but this must be taken with a grain of salt, for it is the most natural thing in the world for any one possessing a gift to exercise it.

There is certainly no doubt that she made an offensive campaign against Josh Miller. Josh was the only man in the county who refused to bend the knee to Mandy, and it was his rebellion against her authority as universal conqueress that spurred her on to conquer him. Josh was distinctly a man's man and would have nothing to do with girls. During the day he attended to his farm duties, and in the evening he studied, for Josh was ambitious to make something of himself more exalted than an ordinary farm hand. And it is likely that this was an additional inducement for Mandy to bring him down.

Josh first saw the enemy approach when he was plowing. Mandy, tricked out in her finest finery, came fluttering across the fields, the colors of her garments lighted by the morning sun and resembling the star spangled banner. She was carrying a tin pail and cup, and when she reached Josh she said:

"I kind o' thought, Mr. Miller, that you must be thirsty drivin' the plow all the mornin', and I just drew some cider and have brought it to you"

"Much obleeged, Miss Carpenter, and I'm sorry you've had so much trouble for nothin'. I never drink cider. It doesn't set well on my stomick."

"Oh, you don't!" looking very disappointed. "I'll leave it here under this tree, and maybe you'll change your mind later on. I wonder if I could set on that seat without fallin' off."

"No; you couldn't. Besides, I'm settin' there myself, and there ain't room for two."

"I'm pinin' for a ride this morning, and I think you might drive the horses on foot long enough for me to get one. I'd like mighty well to sit on the plow seat till you've been down one furrow and back the other."

Josh was moved to say that he had no time to give a girl a ride on the plow, but it was simply a question between them whether he would drive the plow on foot and let Mandy ride or be mean enough to refuse her. Since there was nothing mean about him he got down and helped Mandy up on to the seat, which was made of iron and quite spacious.

Since Josh had the reins there was nothing by which Mandy could balance herself, so she clutched the sides of the seat with her hands. She was in danger of falling, and Josh, walking close beside her, held the reins in one hand and supported her with the other. In order to hold her in place he was obliged to put his arm around her waist. In this way they proceeded until they had reached the turn.

"I don't see," said Mandy, "any reason why you can't sit up on the seat yourself. There's room enough for two. We're neither of us big, and you could hold me on better than walkin' on the ground."

"No, I couldn't," replied Josh. "How could I hold you on? If I got up there I'd have to drive with both hands."

"I could hold on to you."

By this time the encirclement of her waist had moved Josh to view a position beside Mandy with pleasant anticipation. She moved aside, and he got up on to the seat. It was utterly impossible for them to sit there without one of them clinging to the other. Mandy did the clinging, while Josh planted his feet so as to brace himself and drove with both hands.

When the horses had pulled them up one length and back another Mandy said she'd had enough of that sort of riding and, thanking Josh, was about to leave him when he said that he thought he could stand a drink of the cider, after all.

They went together to the tree under which Mandy had placed the pail, and Josh dipped up a cupful of cider, which he handed to her. She drank a little of it and handed it back to him. He drank the balance, taking care to do so from that part of the cup her red lips had touched. Then he said he thought he would rest a spell and sat down on the grass. Mandy sat down beside him.

The rest of it was very easy. Josh's arm itched to encircle Mandy's waist, and, having been there once, there was no ice to break to put it there again. Josh, however, made two or three movements toward placing it there before he found the courage to complete the encirclement.

When it was learned that Mandy Carpenter had brought down Joshua Miller a wag gave her the nickname of Davy. When asked why he did so he replied that when the famous hunter Davy Crockett had told a coon to come down from a tree the coon had replied, "Well, if you're Davy Crockett I reckon I'll come down," which meant that no coon could stand against Crockett's rifle.

Mandy always declared that Josh was the only man she deliberately undertook to get into her toils, and she had done so because she wanted him and none other. Be this as it may, she married him and thus ended the stream of suitors that was continually flowing past her.

The Most Difficult.

"What do you consider the most difficult feat in the world?"

"Well, there may be things harder than proving to your wife that she is extravagant, but I don't know what they are."—Life.

KINGSTON, N Y, NOV 3, 1916.

It was the Kaiser who ranged God on the side of Germany in the world war but the first claim of Deity being a duly affiliated aide to the Democratic party and Woodrow Wilson was made by a campaign orator on a Kingston street corner There has been a marked shift in principals at Armageddon in the last four years if this speaker is to be accepted as an authority The utterance is a fair sample of the quadrennial lapse of ordinary standards of conduct on the part of orators Crowd hypnotism is the only satisfactory explanation of the insane length to which these frenzied harangues are carried by their makers whether they are appealing to divinity or to ancestry While no reference is intended to Harry Daugherty's platform efforts as an apologist for the Wilson administration and the Democratic party in Kingston and elsewhere, the political phenomena mentioned is only another form of dementia Americana As a rule a circle of hardheaded American citizens takes little stock in such tirades They amuse and sometimes they make people think—along lines far different than what the speaker intended The political attitude of Deity is usually left out of the reckoning by sensible people and is as much a mystery to the laity as is the silent vote to the politicians

We are now in the closing week of the campaign The crescendo of oratory that followed the sounding of the keynotes will soon give way to the diminuendo which will mark the casting and the counting of the ballots recording the popular verdict on the competing musicians While containing many more notes the Wilson score has been rendered with many shocking discords in sharp contrast to the harmony that has been a consistent characteristic of the Hughes compositions. The Wilson accompaniments have been [illegible] and the rendition, supposed to indicate deep feeling, has been superficial in the extreme The martial strains have been so hopelessly intermixed with the pacifist lullabies as to leave the audience bewildered and confused as to the composer's meaning Then, too the soft pedal has been used in the wrong places The composer errs also in striving for an effect which is far beyond his abilities, to say nothing of the limits of human comprehension The idealism of some of the solo parts clashes with the sudden and martial strains of the brass band, interpollated purely for sound effect The clear and lofty tone of the patriotic parts of the Hughes arrangement are consistent throughout and harmony is an outstanding feature of his support The concerts will be continued up to election day and it is difficult to believe that the American people will be at all hesitant in expressing their preference for the old-fashioned melodies as brought down to date by Mr Hughes, in lieu of the confusion of sounds which have emanated from the Wilson music box and its weird combination of starts stops and reversals during the last four years

The intricacies of government have not been lessened by the invasion of Ulster county by the city of New York, and in the protection of its multitude of interests Senator Walton during his two years' term in the State Senate has shown a knowledge of conditions here that could have been acquired in no other way save that of actual experience Engaged in the trial of cases arising out of the condemnation of land for the Ashokan reservoir and Catskill aqueduct Senator Walton came closer to the people than most men, and to their needs and the needs of the towns and county he responded quickly But his constituents have also larger interests to which he has devoted himself conscientiously The constructive legislation of the past two years has received careful study by him, and, thoroughly familiar with the needs of his entire district he has worked ceaselessly for the enactment of laws designed to protect and advance the best interests of the people. The Foods and Markets Law was enacted with his active aid, and a score of other similar measures vitally affecting the every-day welfare of the public have received his consistent support. His affability and ability have combined to give him a warm place in the hearts of the voters of the district, who have [illegible] to know that they can depend on him without fear because his judgment has unerringly led him to do what was for their best interests. The man who is always "on the job" for his constituents can be depended upon to stay there. Senator Walton's record for the past two years is not one for which either he or the voters need make apologies, but is one of which both may and do feel proud. That record can be continued only by his re-election

In giving an efficient and business-like administration of State affairs, consideration of the personality of the voters' representatives in the legislature is of paramount importance No matter how able and fearless the State officials are, they will be handicapped in their work without the aid of a conscientious and able legislature The legislator should be not only a man of standing in his own community but also possess integrity and have a practical working knowledge of public affairs, and to these the possession of past legislative experience adds a valuable asset In voting for Joel Brink for assemblyman, the voters of the First Assembly District of Ulster county serve their best interests Mr Brink is a practical business man who first commanded attention by his fight twelve years ago to insure honest elections in the town of Ulster He won that fight and his service as a member of the board of supervisors and later its chairman served to give him that intimate knowledge of legislative proceedings which make a representative valuable to his constituents His interest in all public affairs has always been active, his judgment is sound and in continuing the policy of placing the state on a business basis his past experience will prove of the utmost value Business is not run successfully on mere talk, but must be backed by ability and experience in order that results may be accomplished Mr Brink has both.

Putting the State's business on a business basis was an innovation that met with prompt public approbation when the new business policy was instituted by Governor Whitman after four years' of the scandalous administrations of Dix 'Honest Bill' Sulzer and Glynn. The budget system, which was installed by the Republican State officials and the Republican Legislature, now allows the people to know precisely where they stand in their public finances, just the same as the city, the county and the towns have known for many years. The only people who objected to the budget system were the Tammany heelers who were ousted from office, and they objected to any business methods by which expenses and "honest graft" would be curtailed Who better understands the need of business methods than a business man? Because of his through-going and practical business methods, Abram P LeFever of New Paltz, representing the Second Assembly District of Ulster county was of invaluable assistance in the legislative work of the past session, and his ability was recognized by his important committee assignments For his own district and county Mr LeFever was indefatigable to obtain what his constituents wanted and the appropriation for the New Paltz Normal School is one of the results of his efforts The school itself has been so long established in Ulster county that every resident realizes the practical benefit resulting from its enlargement. In framing legislation to carry out the enlarged business policies of the State Mr LeFever's experience and advice are of immeasurable benefit and his return to the Assembly for another term will be a matter for sincere congratulation for his district, the county and the State.

STREET BLOCKADED.

Congestion Due to Parking Automobiles Should be Stopped.

To the Editor of The Kingston Daily Freeman —

Cannot something be done to remedy the congestion on account of parking of automobiles on Fair, between John and Main streets? On Monday afternoon, during some entertainment in the opera house, autos were lined up on either side of the track so that it was impossible to get near the post office in carriage or car Twice that same afternoon the writer had to take his car through that street when he was met by the trolley Once he was compelled to turn into the Ulster Garage and the other time to reverse for more than half a block

Such a condition means peril, as well as inconvenience, and something should be done by way of relief Some drivers are afraid to go through that street, going the longer way around Are the streets for traffic or for parking cars? At least one side of that street should be left free for vehicles What city department is responsible?

I am sure it would help if The Freeman whose uptown office is on that block would call attention to the peril arising from such congestion.

A man traveling in the Ozark Mountains on horseback came to a stop before a typical Arkansas farm house to inquire the way 'What's the news?" asked the mountaineer as he leaned his lank frame against the fence and pulled his long beard thoughtfully.

On finding that what had long since passed into history was a matter of news to the mountaineer, the traveler asked why he did not take some weekly or monthly periodical that he might keep in touch with the world at large.

GREAT CONCERT FULLY APPRECIATED

Most Ambitious Musical Performance Ever Given in Kingston Enjoyed by Large Audience in High School Auditorium.

By far the largest, most enthusiastic and appreciative audience ever gathered at a Dodge Subscription Concert, greeted the New York Philharmonic Orchestra at the high school auditorium on Thursday evening. And again, by far the greatest musical performance every attended in Kingston was given by the orchestra numbering about eighty musicians, practically all of whom were artists. Surely those who pleaded for the use of our high school for musical productions of the best and highest sort, must have been more than repaid for their efforts last night, for without the use of the high school auditorium, this concert would have been impossible. The very program bespoke the seriously artistic nature of the performance, presenting as it did a series of orchestral gems surpassingly beautiful, and indeed worthy of the Philharmonic's Jubilee year, its seventy-fifth season.

What follows in this article is not intended as a "criticism," of what seemed for the most part a perfect rendition of the music,, but as attempting to preserve in ordinary language the impressions of such music as cannot itself be described in any language.

A touch of the tonic salt air blowing over the Hebrides, the sparkle of waves in sunlight, the incessant movement of the water and the liquid mysteries of Fingal's Cave, fascinated the listener to the music as it must have fascinated Mendelssohn and stirred his creative genius to crystalize the same in tone, in the Fingal's Cave overture, the first member on the program. Yet one's attention and interest could not but be divided between the charm of the composition and the poetic reading of the same by Josef Stransky, the conductor, and the performance by the men at the desks. The richness of the string choir was beyond words; as could be only where the players were artists and the instruments the rarest and the blending of all the choirs such as to make one great instrument fit for the picturing tonally of the world's greatest masterpieces of music. Appreciating this power at his command, Mr. Stransky wielded it, through the sweep of his baton most marvelously.

Perhaps no number was listened to with keener apreciation, because it was already dear to the hearts of the audience, than the Schubert "Unfinished" Symphony. The rare beauty of the Allegro Moderato movement seemed well nigh perfect, the mellowness of the brasses being ideal. Beautiful as was the first movement, the second "Andante con moto" seemed even more so, the very etherealness of the music still having a human warmth and sympathetic blending of the melodic phrases that gave one the feeling that the conductor had grasped and imparted to his players that conception which was more warmly living that when it came from the baton of Gericke, and less feverish than when interpreted by Nickisch. It left the impression that the work might well be called "Unfinished," not because it merely lacked a third movement, but because being finite with an outreach into eternity it could not be finished. The enthusiasm of the audience was fully aroused by this number, and conductor Stransky was recalled several times.

A tremendous contrast was presented by the next number, the overture to Weber's "Der Freischutz," opening with the compelling melody for horns like a hymn of invocation, and giving forth the weirdness of the midnight glen scene, the dash of the huntsmen, and finally the heroine's song of jubilation. The enthusiasm of the audience grew with every number, and seemed to increasingly inspire the orchestra, if that could be.

In a little book entitled "Apostrophes," by Alfred Kreymborg, this is written of Tchaikowsky; "Oh! child of the land of snows and tragedy! Was it Melpomene, who, having heard thee sing imparted to thee the power to intone for the world the tales of sorrow and of yearning that thy shadowy-hearted brothers had hidden away within their breasts so many centuries? Thus it must have been, great Russian, for thy voice is the very soul of Tragedy!" Little wonder that "Romeo and Juliet" should have peculiarly appealed to this composer, who in the "Romeo and Juliet" Overture-Fantasia, transcribed to music that drama with its fateful trend toward heart break and death. It seemed to grip the conductor and his musicians in the awfulness of its portent; the depth, tenderness and faithfulness of the love which by its very intensity made the tragedy doubly tragic, and the almost intolerable poignancy of the culminating death scene. Nor could any but a modern orchestra depict the sombre coloring of this composition. Just to recall the performance is to have onen's heart filled with unspeakable foreboding and sense of some impending catastrophe. It was a powerfully masterly presentation of the work, and was applauded again and again.

Wynne Pyle, pianist, came unheralded except as the very fact of her playing a concerto with the Philharmonic Orchestra of New York, was of itself an introduction. The tremendous ovation given her proved her right to play with such other artists, and also proved that she simply captivated the audience. She was particularly fortunate—since she could be the complete master of the situation—in playing the vivid, varied, richly musical Liszt "Concerto in E-flat Major," for it was a work either peculiarly suited to her style or else her style was peculiarly suited to the work. Even when played by many of the world's acknowledged master pianists, the piano so often seems in the orchestra, just what it actually is, "brought in from the side," and not an integral part of the body musical. With her commanding, yet never noise-producing touch, Wynne Pyle made her instrument a living part of the orchestra. Her breadth of conception, full of breathing, pulsing life, her amazingly big and beautiful tone production, and her absolute at-oneness with the orchestra made the Concerto one of the star numbers of the evening, and she was applauded to the echo. The wholesome charm of the woman seemed to fairly vitalize and inspire musicians and audience alike, there being a positive exuberance in her performance.

The program closed with two Wagnerian numbers: "Dreams" an exquisite short number, played so exquisitely that it lost none of its charm because of the size of the orchestra, for it was originally written for a comparatively small orchestra.

The splendidly Wagnerian rendition of the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger," clean cut though intricate, and brilliant beyond measure, called forth deafening and prolonged applause, bringing Conductor Stransky back several times, nor would the audience be satisfied until the entire orchestra had risen to receive their just meed of praise and appreciation

It was an evening of music to go with one through the rest of life, and it was indeed gratifying to be able to record the fact that it was a financial success beyond Mr. Dodge's hopes. And so, in bringing to Kingston the biggest musical event in its history, Mr. Dodge will, for the first time begin to reap a little reward for all his arduous work in behalf of the musical uplift of the community.

Overtones From Orchestral Concert.

One of the notably pleasing features of the Philharmonic Orchestral concert at the high school was the close fellowship that existed between the performers and the conductor and among the players themselves. Inward knowledge of the conductor's satisfaction in an especially well rendered passage was vividly reflected in the faces of the musicians, and the spirit of the different compositions seemed to pass across the countenances of the performers like the shadow from clouds upon a landscape. And the uplifted faces of the men could but impress one with the sense of the man's best work being done.

Perhaps there was no greater satisfaction depicted upon any face than that of Mr. Dodge. It has been an uphill task to accomplish what he has, but he expressed the sense of complete gratification in that last night's performance made good from every viewpoint; the audience was more than pleased; the orchestra was pleased with the audience, and this year's concerts will make good financially, though there will be no considerable surplus.

Both Conductor Stransky and the musicians expressed to Mr. Dodge their gratification at the reception afforded them in the intent silence of the audience throughout each number, the hearty and appreciative, yes and discriminating applause throughout the entire program. Could all this have been possible if we, as a community, had not been made somewhat familiar with orchestral music through the medium of our own infant but aspiring Symphony Orchestra?

Two Visiting Cards.

In 1884 when M. de Lafayette was sent under Louis Philippe as minister extraordinary to China the courtesy of the ambassador exactly imposed the Chinese statesmen, particularly their etiquette. After the negotiations had been completed and M. de Lafayette was ready to embark a delegation brought him a great roll of paper. The ambassador seeing this parcel at once thought this was a present, knowing Chinese methods, but to his surprise they started to unroll the cylinder, which extended to about fifty meters of paper, over 165 feet. Then he learned that it was the visiting card of the „doyen." In returning his modest little bristol board the bumiliated ambassador added a few words, which read, "The ambassador of France regrets that he is able to offer only these simple words to your excellency."

ATTEND THE BIG WEEK-END SALE AT WASHINGTON MARKET

Week-end Sales have become regular trading events in nearly every city of this and other states, and the offerings advertised are of three kinds—"good, bad and indifferent." Homekeepers who have taken advantage of our Saturday specials know where the best food values are to be obtained. We conscientiously adhere to the principle of giving extra savings chances each week-end. And we insist that reputation and character must be upheld in every article and price we mention. That we carry out our advertised claims is proven by the crowds that patronize our weekly sales. Trade here Saturday.

No High-Living Cost at Planthaber's, Saturday

Every housewife knows that food prices have gone and are still going up. The sky seems the limit. The growth of the grocery and meat bill in most instances is a monthly nightmare. And all housewives who complain over the food costs will find this market a great help in their domestic finances. We sell only one kind of Groceries, Meats and Provisions—the best. Buying in large quantities for cash brings us reduced prices and therefore we are enabled to help keep down the "high cost of living." We sell for less than the average store can afford to charge, as is shown by the appended price bulletin for Saturday.

WOMAN FOOTBALL COACH TRAINS HUSKIES

ARKANSAS AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL TEAM AND COACH.

Mrs. Earl W. Brannon, first woman football coach, who is training the First District State Agricultural school, Jonesboro, Ark. She was formerly Miss Cozette McManagil of Lincoln, Neb. Mrs. Brannon is thoroughly familiar with the game and is a great help to her husband who is the official coach of the team.

Mrs. Brannon knows the ins and outs of the game as well as many of the leading coaches of the country and she knows how to develop ability in her squad. While her husband is putting the first team in shape she is drilling the second team. Many famous coaches have said that upon the second team rests the strength of the first. She already has developed several men who show prospects of making the first eleven.

IS SALVATION OF FOOTBALL

It Seems Certainty That There Is Going to Be Further Developments in Passing Game.

The veterans may complain all they please and criticize "new" football; but their criticism will not stop the evolution of the college sport.

The evolution is natural, and it seems a certainty that there is going to be even further development of the passing game. This prediction is not based on statements of rule-makers and coaches. It comes from observation.

A few days ago a New York city football writer paused to watch a swarm of youngsters playing on the "sand lots." To his astonishment they were throwing a football, rapidly and accurately, 20, 30 and sometimes even 50 feet, and were both hurling and catching it skillfully while on the run. He asked them about it.

They were unanimous in admitting that they liked that sort of game better and that they had little use for plunging tactics. By the time these boys make high school teams they will be adepts at throwing and catching the ball.

It simply means that the rising generation has decreed that the passing has come to stay, for a little investigation proved that school boys are being universally attracted by the open game. And the rising generation is the real sport boss, after all.

CARLISLE TO DROP FOOTBALL

Indians Will Not Be Contenders in Intercollegiate Sport—Game Ordered Subordinated.

The Carlisle Indians will not be contenders in intercollegiate football in the future as a result of a decision rendered by the powers that be. Secretary of the Interior Lane held that in the future football must be subordinated to the educational features of the school. Of 17 Carlisle Indians employed last year in one of the leading automobile factories, 13 were on the team or had been on previous teams. All returned to the school during the football season, at a sacrifice of educational opportunity as well as wages.

NOTES of SPORTDOM

Washington in 11 tries managed to win one game in Detroit this year.

No one ever is really so important as a football coach seems to be in autumn.

Rutgers has a new drop-kicker, Law, a Brooklyn boy, who has made a big hit with Coach Foster Stanford.

The winter league has been officially opened, but the league does not get into full swing until near the holidays.

Certain box-fight promoters oughta qualify for blue ribbons at the horse shows. They're rather spirited chargers, y'know.

The price of cheese is advancing. Which may or may not be the reason fight promoters are not matching heavyweights these days.

Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul phantom, can't see his way clear to performing in New York for the mazuma offered by the Gotham promoters.

Ad Wolgast lost the decision to an unknown in a four-round bout the other night. Maybe it was Willie Ritchie disguised as a wop.

Kid Williams, bantamweight champion of the world, outclassed Benny Kaufman, Philadelphia bantamweight, in six rounds at Philadelphia.

As long as Coach Crowell has Weldon at Lafayette it will be mighty hard for opposing teams to break up the maroon and white's forward passes.

According to ringside reports, Freddie Welsh continues to take a beating in every bout as well as winning the decision and retaining the lightweight crown.

The William college football team was riddled of stars through graduation last spring. The team lost Plante, Garfield, Brown, Overton, Tompkins and Wright.

As an evidence of the size of the great growth of the Grand American handicap it might be noted 227,250 targets were thrown in the recent tournament.

The average general in the European war may think he has responsibilities, but they are light compared to the responsibilities of the average football coach.

His ability as a musician may account for Johnny Kilbane's rapid work in the ring. Perhaps the featherweight champion takes his opponent for a xylophone.

The Milwaukee Brewers clinched the cellar championship of the American association all three ways—last in team standing, last in team batting and last in team fielding.

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard believes that a man can get an education in four years, but that allows him no time to make the football, baseball or basketball teams.

Out of the Question.

Daddy—"Jeannette, if I allow young Simpson to become my son-in-law, do you suppose he will be willing to work and support you?" Jeannette—"Oh, dad, how can he when he has promised to do nothing but think of me all the time?"—Puck.

Uncle Eben.

"All dat some men 'pears to git out of an education," said Uncle Eben, "is a lifelong desire to talk to folks dat's too busy to listen."

CENTENNIAL OF BIBLE SOCIETY

The one hundredth anniversary of the Ulster County Bible Society will be celebrated at the First Dutch Church on Sunday evening, with interesting services. Dr. Leeper, the pastor of the church, will preside. Judge Clearwater will deliver an historical address, reviewing in a compressed manner the achievements of the society during the one hundred years of its existence, speaking of its presenting to the upwards of three thousand soldiers who enlisted in Ulster county for the War of the Rebellion, of a copy of the New Testament and Psalms, of its supplying the hotels of the county, the steamboats sailing from the port of Rondout and boats plying on the Delaware and Hudson Canal with copies, briefly referring to the distinguished residents of the county who have been officially connected with it. Addresses will be delivered by the Rev. Dr. Fuller, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church upon "The Word of God;" by the Rev. Dr. Ellis, pastor of the Rondout Presbyterian Church upon "The Bible in the Family;" and the Rev. Dr. Baragwanath of St. James's Methodist Episcopal Church upon "The Bible in Civilization." There will be exhibited the portrait of the Rev. Dr. John Gosman, formerly pastor of the First Dutch, and for many years president of the Bible Society, which was painted by John Vanderlyn, the great artist. Among the prominent men of Ulster county who have been officers of the Society were the Hon Abram Bruyn Hasbrouck, President of Rutgers College; John Suydam, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the state of all time; the Hon. Marius Schoonmaker; Archibald Russell, Henry H. Reynolds and the Rev. Dr. Henry Ostrander of Saugerties.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, Nov. 2.—Schaeffer and Ruppert, the new proprietors of Echo Lodge, have just finished unloading a car load of household goods. We wish them success in their new venture.

Charles Bishop and family have moved to Kingston. We are sorry to lose them, but wish them success in their new field of business.

It is rumored that we will soon lose another family from our village, and sorry to hear it, but people cannot live on sympathy, with flour $10.50 per barrel.

The chicken supper held in the M. E. Church recently was well attended and a financial success.

To purchase coal in this vicinity at the present time, is a problem. Our local dealer has none on hand and although he has orders over a month old placed for several car loads, he is unable to get supply. Reports from nearby towns are of the same character.

Political matters in this village are very quiet. Voters are doing a lot of reading and thinking, but very little talking.

A hot chicken supper will be given in the Cottekill Reformed Church on Thursday evening, Nov. 9. Adults 25 cents per plate. Children under 12 years 15 cents per plate. Supper served from six o'clock. All are welcome. Also ice cream for sale. If stormy, next fair evening.

The funeral of William Stalls was held here at the late residence Monday morning and was largely attended. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. McPherson, pastor of the M E Church. He is survived by his widow and one son Robert. Mr. Stalls was one of the oldest residents of this village and has been in the grocery business here for a number of years. In politics Mr. Stalls was a strong Prohibitionist.

Dr. C. V. Hasbrouck of Rosendale is inspecting the children in the school here this week.

Mrs. Marshall Christiana and daughter, Mrs V. Cross of Kerhonkson attended the funeral here on Monday of William Stalls.

C. A. Snyder and family of Kingston spent Sunday here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Vliet of Kingston spent Sunday at James Snyder's.

Thomas Snyder is having his tenant house on the corner reshingled.

Mrs William Frisby and children of Albany are spending some time with Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Matlin.

Mrs. N. Hogeboom, Mrs. James Hotaling and Mrs. Milton Budd of Kingston attended the funeral of William Stalls here on Monday.

Mrs. George Sutton and son John of Germantown spent Friday and Saturday at Uriah Barringer's.

The Prohibition meeting held here Tuesday morning was well attended.

Several from here attended the funeral of Isaac Hotaling at Marbletown on Tuesday.

A Manager's Opinion.

"Nero fiddled while Rome burned." "I don't believe it. No violinist would consent to appear on the same program with a pyrotechnic display."

STREET GOSSIP ABOUT TOWN

"Well I see that Alfred D. Van Buren who is running for senator on the Democratic ticket in the 25th district did not run his political advertisement in Thursday's official Democratic organ," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"Probably some kind friend woke him up and told him that this was the 27th and not the 25th district," replied the politician with a chuckle.

"What do you think of his campaign anyway," asked the friend.

"To be honest," replied the politician, "I hardly think I would care to have a representative at Albany who did not know what district he represented Would you?" countered the politician.

"No, can't say I would," replied the friend thoughtfully.

"Well there will be a countless horde of "I told you so," after the votes are counted next Tuesday night," writes Old Subscriber.

"The Hon. William B Martin, Democratic candidate for assemblyman is advertising himself as 'the alderman that made good' I see," said the friend to the street corner politician.

"Seems to me I did hear he was an alderman at one time," replied the politician after a moment's thought. He paused to light a cigar and continued "Yes, now I can place him He was one of that famous "Band of Seven" that did all it could to block any necessary legislation proposed by Palmer Canfield, Jr., when he was elected mayor, but outside of that he was all right."

"What do you mean all right," asked the friend.

"Why can't you see he is the alderman that always made good, and by that he means he never missed a meeting of the common council while alderman," said the politician chuckling.

"How it is I see you attending all the street corner meetings of Willie DeWitt's Flying Squadron," asked the friend following a slight pause in the conversation stream

"I'll tell you," replied the politician, "I expect to be called upon to make some political speeches next year and I am getting a little dope on how not to make a speech."

Never can tell about a female—Once upon a time there was a young man who decided that it was time for him to get married He glanced around and could not find a young woman in his home town who suited him. So off he went off to the big city and there he met "the only one" He proposed and was accepted. It was decided that he return home, rent a nice little flat, and she would come on, and the marriage bells would ring out. The young man scurried around and secured a flat that he thought would suit his bride-to-be, and he paid a month's rent in advance. He then sent her word to come on She came and was shown through the flat. When she found there was no janitor service and no one to attend to the steam heat but herself while hubby was away working during the day she left town suddenly and returned to the big city saying that she would never marry a man who could not support her in the style she was accustomed to. The moral of this tale if any, is that he was a lucky young man. Just imagine what would happen after they had taken each other for b. or w.

"He kept us out of war."

But how about the present war prices for the necessities of life.

There has been no change in the size of the dollar bill

Except in its purchasing power

BETTING ODDS AS A PROPHECY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 3.—Watch the election bets. Wall Street wager records show that in the last thirty-six years the odds on presidential candidates in the week preceding election have always picked the winner.

It is also a curious fact that only once in the last thirty-six years have the odds on a candidate at first favored fallen, and that time the candidate lost the election.

This was in 1888, when the odds on Cleveland dropped from 10 to 8 to 10 to 9 to even money, and then 10 to 8 on Harrison. Harrison won.

Going back thirty-six years in 1880—The presidential contest was between Garfield, Republican, and Hancock, Democrat. Garfield was a strong favorite all during the campaign, with some fluctuations in the betting, and won the election.

In 1884, in the neck-and-neck fight between Cleveland and Blaine, the bets were at even money up to election day.

In 1888 Cleveland ran against Harrison. Cleveland started out in September a 10 to 8 favorite. Late in September big business took a deeper interest in the Republican fight, and with an influx of campaign contributions for the Harrison fight, the odds reversed until Harrison was a favorite at 10 to 8. The odds remained there until election day, when Harrison was successful.

Cleveland opposed Harrison again in 1892, and started out a favorite at small odds, which increased in the last week of October. He was successful on election day.

In the free silver campaign of 1896, when Bryan was opposed by McKinley, the odds settled in favor of McKinley after Bryan's famous speech in New York on August 12, and rose until, in the week before election, the Republican candidate was a 3 to 1 favorite. McKinley won.

In 1900 Bryan and McKinley were again the contestants. McKinley was a favorite at 10 to 8 and 10 to 7 from the start, and in the week before election was a 2 to 1 candidate. Again the betting odds presaged the result on election day.

Roosevelt ran against Parker in 1904. Roosevelt started out a 2 to 1 favorite in September. The odds on the Republican candidate rose to 3 to 1; 4 to 1 and in the week before election, when the signs of a landslide became apparent, bets were made at 5 to 1 on Roosevelt, the successful candidate.

In the campaign of 1908, when Taft ran against Bryan, the odds were long on Taft from the outset. They went from 2 to 1 to 11 to 5, to 5 to 1 to 7 to 2, and in the week before election Lloyds was offering 9 to 1 that Taft would be elected, and he was.

In the famous three-cornered campaign of 1912, when Wilson, Democrat; Taft, Republican; and Roosevelt, Progressive, were the candidates, the odds in Wall street were always long on Wilson. He started out a 2 to 1 favorite soon after the placing of the third ticket in the field. In the week before election the odds were 4 to 1 and 5 to 1 on Wilson to win. Incidentally, the betters made a mistake as to the Taft and Roosevelt results, for the 3 to 1 wagers were on Wilson to beat Taft and 4 to 1 on Wilson to beat Roosevelt, whereas Roosevelt's vote exceeded Taft's.

Election betting prior to 1880 is a bit hazy in the record. The odds varied greatly, bets being more or less a matter of sentiment. But since then the odds made on Wall street have prevailed in election betting, and the wagers there are not matters of sentiment, but pure speculation. This is shown by the fact that some of the largest wagers ever recorded have been placed, it is said, by Republicans against Republican candidates and vice versa.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS NOTES

The Athletic Association of the high school organized Wednesday for the coming year. There was a large number of boys and girls present who elected the following officers: Edwin Relyea, president; Helen Wood, vice president; Faith Safford, secretary; and Alfred Schmid, treasurer. It costs each of the students seventy-five cents a year to be a member of this organization, but this amount is soon made up by the twenty-five per cent reduction that is allowed all members of the Athletic Association on the price of all tickets for athletic contests in the school.

The Varsity and Midget basketball teams have started in to train down for business and Captain Joyce and Prof. Schumaker are confident of a successful season. A big share of last year's Varsity men are back and there is plenty of raw material falling around the gymnasium during practice hours for the veterans to practice on.

The senior class at a meeting this week decided to give a dance in the gymnasium November 17. There was no opposition to President Gleason's suggestion on the subject and the class voted him the power to appoint a committee to arrange for the dance. He appointed Alice Scott and Arthur Warren, so there can be little doubt as to the success of the affair.

This Friday, for the first time since the new high school has been in use, the students enjoyed a half holiday. It is the first time in many a day that high school students in this city have had so little tardiness during a whole month that they might profit by the ruling of the board which grants the first Friday afternoon in the month in return for gaining certain per cent of attendance This goes to show that the students are putting forth an effort to make up for the lost time in September.

When work is well done— Approve it!

You have a direct interest in the results accomplished by your State Legislature during the past two years in bringing back your government to an orderly, businesslike basis in spite of the tremendous handicaps imposed by four years of Democratic mismanagement.

The Legislatures of 1915 and 1916 were Republican by responsible majorities.

Their work in the interests of Good Government was so well done that it deserves your enthusiastic approval.

Read this brief summary of work accomplished:

Immediate legislation was enacted to correct the abuses of four years of Democratic administration, to place the State's business once more on a sound basis, and to provide adequate and necessary appropriations for the support of the government.

The useless office of Fire Marshall which overlapped the functions of local authorities and other State departments, and the Department of Efficiency and Economy, which had a high sounding title and a big payroll, but which duplicated much of the work of other departments, were abolished.

The important departments of the State Government were reorganized on a more businesslike basis. For example, the Board of Claims, which was three years behind in its work, was replaced by a Court of Claims, and in two years it has done more work than was done by the old board in four years.

No new departments or offices were created except in connection with the consolidation of departments. In this respect the Republican Legislature reversed the Democratic policy.

As a result of reorganizing the departments of the State, the expense of administration of the affairs of the State was cut down by more than half a million dollars!

Laws for the protection of the interests of wage earners were enacted; much needed changes were made in the Workmen's Compensation Law and a large amount of important legislation assuring a SQUARE DEAL for employer and employee alike, was enacted.

The chaotic conditions with respect to the State's prisons, reformatory and charitable institutions, were corrected by legislation that provided better quarters for the State's wards and a more efficient administration of these important departments.

Legislation was enacted for continuing the work of building good roads, for payment of claims for cattle condemned by the State, for the elimination of grade crossings, for building up the Department of Food and Markets, and for other activities in the interests of Agriculture, which will be of benefit to the whole State.

The State's finance and tax work was reorganized and put on a more businesslike basis, with the result that in spite of the heavy Democratic obligations that had to be met by the Legislature of 1915, the present obligations of the State have been met by the Legislature of 1916 without the imposition of a direct tax!

There's a record to be proud of!

Doesn't the present administration DESERVE YOUR SUPPORT at the polls, no matter what your "politics" may be?

SHADE TREES ON STATE ROADS

New York College of Forestry Finds Great Neglect in This Respect.

By investigation just completed by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse it has been found that nine-tenths of the roadsides in the rural districts of New York state are entirely void of shade trees. When this is considered along with the fact that last year New York state paid out of the state treasury about $50,000,000 for the construction and maintenance of roadbeds it shows that the state is not yet awake to the great need and the great possibilities in rural roadside improvement. The preliminary survey which has just been made by H. R. Francis, in charge of the landscape extension work of the College of Forestry, covered nearly 3,000 miles of the main lines of highways passing through such important points as Rochester, Buffalo, Jamestown, Olean, Hornell, Corning, Ithaca, Cortland, Elmira, Binghamton, Oneonta, Kingston, Hudson, Albany, Schenectady, Glens Falls, Lake Placid, Malone, Potsdam, Watertown, Utica, Rome and Syracuse.

EXAMPLE OF WELL SHADED ROADWAY.

During the survey studies were made of such important features in rural roadside improvement and beautification as good and bad varieties of trees found along the highways, views and vistas obtained from the highways, the effects of the shade trees on crops in adjacent fields, the possibilities of the covering of barren embankments and the planting of some desirable sort of vegetation where overhead wires are in large numbers. One of the principal features studied was the condition of the roadbed as affected by the presence or absence of shade trees.

This is the first comprehensive study to be made of the landscape treatment of the rural roadsides in the state, and the college predicts a wider appreciation of the possibilities and the necessity for the planting and preservation of forest trees along the rural roadsides.

Good Roads 9 Cents Per Acre.

Vermillion county, Illinois, is expending this summer the proceeds of a $1,500,000 twenty year bond issue in building a system of concrete and brick roads which will reach all parts of the country, says the American Farmer. Accurate computations show that the average cost of the roads will be about 9 cents per year per acre. Several other counties in the state will vote on similar bond issues this fall, while in still others campaigns of education are being conducted. The growth in interest in good roads is not confined to Illinois; the farmers in adjoining states are just as keen for permanent highways, and some of them, notably in Indiana, have already secured them.

Edison For Better Roads.

State control of all roads, the use of concrete only for new construction, and the employment of an experienced French road engineer were some of the remedies Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, advocated for better roads in New Jersey. His opinions were read at a meeting of the new roads legislative committee appointed by Governor Fielder.

The meeting, which was attended by many officials throughout the state, went on record in support of the Egan $7,000,000 good roads bill, which will be voted on in the state in the November election.

POULTRY

FOR SUCCESS WITH PIGEONS

Variety of Good, Hard Grains Is Essential—Not Advisable to Feed Birds on Wet Ground.

A variety of good, hard grains is essential to success with pigeons, and grains which are in poor condition should not be fed. Old grains which are hard are better than new soft grains, especially for pigeons with squabs. Red wheat is considered better than white wheat by many pigeon breeders. Good wheat screenings are often fed with success, as they usually contain a variety of seeds. Various stimulating seeds, such as lentils and vetch, are sometimes fed as a tonic to breeding birds during the molting period.

The grain may be fed on the floor of the pen, in troughs, or kept before the birds in hoppers. It is not generally considered advisable to feed the grain on the ground, especially on heavy soil where it may get wet and moldy. Unless the floor is kept clean it is better to feed the grain in troughs than on the floor. The troughs should be made so that the pigeons will not roost on them and soil the feed with their droppings.

Hoppers are used with good success but may attract rats in some pigeon houses. They should be fitted with wires or nails about two inches apart so that the pigeons cannot waste the feed by throwing it out onto the floor. If the grain is not fed in hoppers the pigeons should be fed twice daily, in the morning and in the afternoon, at regular hours, giving from one and one-half to two quarts of grain at each meal to 20 pairs of pigeons and adding an extra pint if the pigeons have many squabs. The feeder must regulate the quantity of grain according to the appetite of the birds, giving them all they will clean up in one to two hours.

KEEP VALUABLE MALE FOWLS

Confine Roosters in Separate Pens and Market Infertile Eggs—Sell All But Breeders.

(By T. E QUISENBERRY.)

No one asks or expects a farmer or poultry raiser to kill or sell valuable breeding males. You might not be able to find what you want to take their places the following season. The males would be better off, however, and so would the females and would make better breeders the following season, if the males were confined to separate quarters and kept with but few, if any, hens.

Keep the males from the laying hens and market infertile eggs. Unless you are certain you will need the males another season, it is best to sell them and to give the room to the young stock. The feed the old males will eat and which you would save would almost pay for new males, thus giving you new blood and, perhaps, better males. Consider all these facts before acting.

OLD HENS ARE UNPROFITABLE

Aged Fowls Cause Low Average in Egg Production—Three Years Is Limit of Usefulness.

Old hens are the cause of low averages in egg-production. The pullets work regularly but the old hens lay about a dozen eggs and rest the remainder of the year.

Unless you are raising a particular stock of chickens of which you have only a few hens, you cannot afford to keep the old hens as layers. A hen is not profitable after her third summer as a layer. Selling the old hens and using the incubator for hatching is the best plan for the small poultryman.

HINTS FOR POULTRY RAISERS

Keep Overactive Cockerels in Separate Yard—Soft Fresh Dirt Is Good for Chicks.

Sour milk is valuable in any ration.

Summer shade insures thrifty chicks.

Remove overactive cockerels to a separate yard.

Clean up the incubator, remove the lamp, and throw away the wick.

Soft fresh dirt is an insurance against leg weakness in chicks.

Pipe Wood.

French brier is the wood most used for making pipes. Little of this wood is now coming to this country, and substitutes for it are being sought for. Of these mountain laurel is considered the best. Other woods suggested are apple wood, red gum, ebony and birch.

SOCIAL ANNOYANCES.

Somewhat Similar in the Tenth Century to What They Are Today.

That there were objections in the social amenities of life in the tenth century similar to those observable at the present day is shown in a remarkable book, "Makura no Zoshi," which was the work of Sei Shongon, a poetess of the ancient Japanese court. One of her chapters she devotes to "Detestable Things," and these included:

"A visitor who sits down to regale you with a long tale when you are in a hurry. If by chance he is an intimate friend you can pack him off until another time. But those whom you cannot summarily dismiss are detestable indeed.

"Babies who cry or dogs that bark just when you are trying to overhear something.

"A dog that barks at visitors. I have often wanted to kill such dogs.

"People who interrupt your story to show off their own cleverness. All interrupters, young and old, are very detestable.

"People who when you are telling a story break in with 'Oh, I know,' and give quite a different version from your own.

"Either at home or in the palace to be roused up to receive an unwelcome visitor in order to avoid whom you have been pretending to be asleep."

INDEXING BOOKS.

The Custom Is an Old One That Developed Rather Slowly.

The custom of indexing books developed gradually. Cicero used the word "index," but in the sense of a table of contents. Seneca provided some works which he sent to a friend with notes of particular passages, "so that he who only aimed at the useful might be spared the trouble of examining them entire." This was at least a partial "index" in the modern sense. Annotated, or at least explanatory, tables of contents seem to have preceded the index proper.

Such tables followed the order of appearance of the subjects in the book itself. Alphabetical arrangement, which was the beginning of the real index, appears not to have been thought of until the invention of printing, and even then it spread but slowly. Erasmus was one of the first to provide his works with alphabetical indexes. The custom did not become universal until well into the sixteenth century.

The first index to an English book is said to be that printed in Polydore Vergil's "Anglica Historica" in 1546. An edition of this work published ten years later has an index of thirty-seven pages.

President Wilson's Administration in four years has given the nation more constructive legislation than the Republican Party has had the imagination to promise in the last forty years.

President Wilson plans further constructive legislation along safe, sane, constructive, conserving lines, and it is necessary that he should have a Democratic Congress behind him to carry this legislation into effect.

William F. McCombs's record is such as to qualify him as a worthy candidate for the United States Senate. He is a scholar and a gentleman. Educated at Princeton and Harvard Universities, he has practiced law in New York, managed the National campaign which resulted in the election of Woodrow Wilson as President, was Chairman of the Democratic National Committee and was tendered the Ambassadorship to France. He is a trustee of the College of the City of New York and a member of the American Bar Association.

SIX ARRESTED FOR SUBWAY WRECKING

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 3.—Six men were arrested today charged with wrecking the subway at 110th street and Lenox avenue with a dynamite bomb on October 24.

Five of the men, the police say, are traction strikers. The sixth is a chauffeur.

According to the police, some of the men confessed to amazing plans of wholesale violence and destruction in this city. It was said that the plans included wrecking the Times Square station, the busiest subway station in New York, with dynamite.

The police are seeking a seventh conspirator.

The arrests came as the result of a constant watch which has been kept at the plant of the Hercules Powder Company at Kenvil, N. J. The police had learned that the dynamite used at 110th street had been bought there and they felt certain that the men would return for more.

The prisoners gave these names: Michael Herlihy, financial secretary to the Carmen's Union; George Pollock, Clarence Kulle, J. J. Maura, Benjamin Hamilton and Thomas MacGuire. MacGuire is the chauffeur.

After the arrests Captain Tunney, of the detective bureau, issued this statement:

"We have evidence that the funds financing this explosion and other contemplated explosions came from the Carmen's Union. We are on the trail leading to other arrests and Herlihy who has made a partial confession, has furnished the trail.

According to information which the police claim to have the Fifty-ninth street subway station was marked for destruction as well as that at Times Square

The first clue was the discovery of five fulminating caps and some fuse in Central Park, just after the 110th street explosion. These were found to have been made at Kenvil.

WATCHFUL WAITING IN MARINA CASE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The question of violation of Germany's submarine warfare pledges in the sinking of the Marina and the Rowanmore was still far from settled today The feeling in some quarters that there was no violation of law in the attack upon the Marina has spread until it is almost generally accepted.

State department officials consider it uncertain whether they will ever know the facts in the sinking of the Rowanmore and the reported shelling of life boats containing Americans after they had left the vessel.

The department is awaiting confirmation or denial by the British admiralty of the report that the submarine that attacked the Rowanmore was shelled and sunk afterward by a British naval vessel.

Several additional reports on the two cases had been received by the state department today but they were not made public It was stated however, that so far the facts as reported to the department are the same as outlined in press dispatches.

Final information is not expected for several days yet, and no decision will be made by the state department until the return of Secretary of State Lansing from his home in Watertown N. Y., and of President Wilson from Shadow Lawn, after the national election.

CARLSTROM LANDS IN NEW YORK CITY

Swooped Down on Governor's Island at 8:55 This Morning, Having Made Two Stops on Trip From Chicago.

By Telegraph to The Freeman

New York, Nov. 3 —Victor Carlstrom, aviator, completed his Chicago-New York flight at 8:55 a. m. today when he landed in safety on Governor's Island.

Carlstrom was forced to make two stops during his journey. His original plan was to make the trip between sunrise and sunset of one day. But forced him to descend at Erie Pa., yesterday afternoon. Darkness came on as he reached Hammondsport, N. Y., last night, and he remained over there, resuming his aerial voyage shortly after daybreak.

Carlstrom was given a tumultuous welcome when he swooped down onto Governor's Island at 8:55½ a. m. (Official time.) A large crowd had assembled. Carlstrom, after locating the island and being signalled about his landing place, made a grand circle over Brooklyn and Buttermilk Channel and then descended gracefully.

Carlstrom's unofficial average flying time was close to 107 miles an hour.

The aviator left Chicago at 6:09½ a. m. yesterday. Without a stop, he travelled to Erie, a distance of 452 miles, in four hours, seventeen and a half minutes. Before sunset he had reached Hammondsport, making a total of 652 miles, covered in six hours, 7½ minutes

Carlstorm left Hammondsport, a distance of about 300 miles from New York, at 6.35 this morning, and came through to New York without making a stop.

REFUSED TO OBEY.

Major Butler Carried His Obstinacy Right Into His Coffin.

An amusing incident of camp life in Revolutionary days is related by the author of "Romance and Realism of the Southern Gulf Coast."

In 1798 the first United States troops that came down the Mississippi were quartered at Fort Adams. General Wilkinson by some accident had his cue burned off. Angry at the laugh which followed his mishap, he next day issued an order forbidding any officer to appear with a cue Obedient to orders, all the officers but Major Butler cut off their cues.

"The vain old prig," said the major "I'll see him hanged before I cut off my cue to gratify him!" And he boldly appeared without changing the style of his hairdressing.

The major was put under arrest, but he declared obstinately that he would spend the rest of his life in prison before he would comply with such a silly command. Soon afterward he was taken very ill, and, realizing that he was at the point of death, he gave instructions for his burial, which he knew would be witnessed by the whole command.

"Bore a hole," said he, "through the bottom of my coffin, right under my head, and let my cue come through it, that the old general may see that even when dead I refuse to obey his order."

And these directions were literally carried out.

ONE CENT A WORD ADVS. BRING RESULTS

SETTLED OUT OF COURT

By BARBARA PHIPPS

Effie Howland, a retiring young lady of eighteen, having been courted by Judge Atherton, who at thirty had been endowed with judicial honors, accepted him, and all went well between them until Miss Howland's elder sister, Margaret, interfered. Margaret had recently been graduated from a law school and was an active worker in the cause of woman's advancement. She was as aggressive as Effie was retiring. Being one of those persons who would make all persons like themselves, she endeavored to persuade her sister that she should give up matrimony for a profession. After exhausting argument she turned to acting for Effie on her own account. She wrote Judge Atherton a note breaking her sister's engagement.

To this note the judge replied, asking in what capacity Margaret acted for her sister. Was she agent, counselor or did she claim the right as older sister? Margaret replied that any of these would fit the case, but she preferred to be considered her sister's attorney.

Margaret was somewhat taken back by a reply from the judge stating that he would hear the case the next afternoon in room 45, superior court building. After thinking the matter over she concluded to accept the judge's challenge.

Margaret, who was very proud of her legal attainments, would have gladly prepared herself for the coming tussle which she expected would be fought out in legal parlance, but she had no idea what ground Judge Atherton would take. Consequently she went with her sister to the judge's office room at the hour appointed, obliged to rely on her general legal knowledge and her wits. As the two ladies entered he rose and motioned them to chairs, then seated himself behind his mahogany desk.

"I understand," he said to Margaret, "that your sister, having made an agreement to enter into a contract of marriage with me, now desires to break the agreement. I think I am entitled to know the grounds on which she proposes to take such action."

"Effie," Margaret replied, "has reconsidered the matter of a career and has decided that a profession is desirable. Marriage, which involves children, would interfere with such a career, so she had decided to forego marriage."

The judge did not ask Effie if this was her or her sister's decision, but he looked at her, their eyes met, and they understood each other.

"The law," he said, "recognizes an engagement as a contract. It is certainly an agreement to make a contract, and, although it comes under different laws from marriage, it involves obligations. Suit may be brought by either man or woman for breach of promise to marry. I shall expect you to show cause why I, having received your sister's promise to marry me, should not enter suit for damages."

"In the first place, a law covering breach of promise is intended for the protection of weak woman against the villainy of man. In the second place, you have not been damaged by my client. Consequently there can be no decision in your favor."

"I have been eight years in the law, two of which have been spent on the bench, and this is the first time I have heard a lawyer decide a case for plaintiff and defendant, judge and jury, before trial. You have defined the intent of the law, which is admissible, but I do not admit your interpretation. You have decided for judge and jury that your client would not be compelled to pay damages, which is not within your province as a lawyer."

"Will you kindly inform me," rejoined Margaret, "wherein my sister has injured you by promising to marry you and subsequently deciding that she would not keep her promise?"

"This being merely a hearing and not a trial, I am not required to give you such information."

Margaret was fast losing her temper. The judge maintained his seriousness toward her, though when she turned away for a moment he winked at her client and received a smile in return.

"Nevertheless," snapped Margaret, "as a gentleman, in deference to that chivalry due to women"—

"Since woman," interrupted the judge, "is assuming the rights of men there is no further need for chivalry."

"I don't mean that Effie will be at all beholden to you if you release her from her engagement. The more fool she for having made such an engagement. I merely mention your duty in the matter incidentally."

The judge looked at the ceiling as if for inspiration.

"I think," he said, "that this case should be settled out of court."

"You mean that you will act directly with my sister and keep her under your thumb."

"No; the case may proceed right here, where you have free access to your client. Effie, do you wish to be released from your engagement?"

"No, dear judge."

Atherton smiled. Margaret looked at her sister in scornful contempt.

"The case is closed," said the judge. "But one thing remains to be done—kiss and make up."

Leaving his position behind his desk, he advanced to his fiancee and kissed her.

The attorney for the defendant turned her back on them both and swept out of the room.

Real Conquest.

The man who, being insulted, can bear the insult with composure and not pay back with another has achieved a great conquest in life.—Genevio-Lax.

HOW

To Plant Trees So That They Thrive Wonderfully

"I CANNOT understand why so many of the trees I planted last spring failed to grow. They were as fine a lot as I ever saw, straight, shapely and well rooted, and I set them out with more than ordinary care, but nearly one-half of them never put forth a leaf. What do you think was the reason?"

Complaints of this sort are frequently received from disappointed tree planters, and we believe the most frequent cause of failure is careless handling of the stock after it leaves the nursery. Sometimes this carelessness is the fault of the purchaser, but more often of the dealer who buys trees in large quantities for his retail trade. The nurseryman as a rule packs the stock carefully, knowing full well the danger of exposure of the roots to air and sunlight.

Exposure of the tender rootlets of trees and shrubs to sun and wind for even a short time is extremely injurious and should never be allowed. They should be carefully wrapped and kept damp from the moment they leave their native soil until they are transplanted.

Frequently the thoughtless or inexperienced planter is to blame rather than the dealer. Perhaps he is not quite ready to plant when the stock arrives and, instead of "heeling in" the trees or shrubs or storing them in a dark, damp place, allows them to remain exposed for some time until the roots are so badly dried out that they are practically dead before planting. Such neglect, whether the fault of shipper or purchaser, is a frequent cause of failure and discouragement in tree planting.

HANGING PICTURES.

Why Some Pictures Belong Only to Certain Rooms.

The personality of the owner should be expressed in the pictures in the home, according to Miss Araminta Holman, instructor in domestic art in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

"A picture may be suitable for one room, but quite out of place in another," says Miss Holman. "The living or reception room should pay homage to the good taste of the guests. The family bedroom may be filled with many heirloom portraits, but in any room family portraits are best in the closet or drawer unless the originals stood for some trait of character worthy of emulation or unless their portraits were painted by masters.

"Any one can purchase photographs of the best. A poor original is worthless, while a good reproduction of a masterpiece may be priceless in the formation of one's own taste and character.

"Do away with the inevitable mountings of fish and game in the dining room. A dead rabbit or a stale, dusty fish in the table service and is not conducive to an enjoyable meal. For a delft blue dining room Dutch pictures repeating the color scheme of the room are good. Otherwise the same kind of pictures may be used in the dining room that are used in the living room."

How to Make Your Child Grow Up to Be Beautiful.

Every mother desires that her child shall be beautiful, but beauty on the outside is born of health on the inside. The same is true of beauty of disposition or of what we are wont to term "goodness" in the child. It is exceedingly difficult for people of mature years, possessed of some degree of self control, to be bright, cheerful and amiable with a body suffering with ill health. How much more so for the child!

Every child may not be endowed with perfect symmetry of face and figure, but the sunny disposition, the clear complexion, the rosy cheeks, the gleaming eye, the ruby lips, the pearly teeth, the plump form, together with perfect poise of body, which all may cultivate, will lend even a greater charm.

Early beginnings count for much in matters pertaining to health, as with all other things connected with child culture. Upon the right treatment of the little babe during the first year depends much of its subsequent well being.

How to Bake Cookies Like Mother Used to Make.

The secret of making good cookies is to use just enough flour to roll them without sticking. To do this take several thicknesses of white muslin, or part of an old sheet folded to fit the board will do. Sprinkle with flour. Take part of the dough at a time and roll with light touch, never pressing hard on cooky or doughnut dough. The following recipe is fit for a king: A cupful of butter or mixed butter and lard, one-half cupful of sugar, three good tablespoonfuls of cold water, in which dissolve a level teaspoonful of soda; two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, small teaspoonful of cloves, a cupful of dates and nuts (not chopped, but cut fine). Bake in quick oven not too hot.

How to Mend Broken China So It Won't Show Cracks.

The best means for mending china, porcelain or pottery of any description is white oil paint. Buy a tube of a good make and use it like tube paste. If you have a box of oil colors add enough of any tint to the white to match the broken article, but the white paint does not show and is astonishingly effective.

CHINESE SOLDIERS.

They Are Regarded With Aversion by Their Own Countrymen.

The well known olden dislike of, even contempt for, soldiers common to the industrious masses of China, in town as in country, is based on their experience that the soldier is a loafer most of the time and a terror to his country when war is in the air. They have not glorified valor or quite grasped the beauty, not to say the duty, of dying for one's country, although when they do fight they face death with a great indifference.

Discussing this phase of the Chinese character, Mr. Yone Noguchi, the Japanese writer, says in the course of a recent article:

"The Chinese hatred of soldiery business or the encouragement of effeminate indolence is well explained in a famous ballad written by Po Chui, called 'The Arm Broken Old Man.' This old man was not infirm until he received in his youth an order to become a soldier and intentionally broke his arm in order to be excused from such duty. Although his arm pained badly on a cold or rainy day, he was glad to be thankful for it, for, while his friends had been killed in the battlefield, he alone could enjoy a long life."

"What a different sentiment from that of us Japanese, whose loyalty to the flag and the imperial house is taught to begin with the slighting of our own lives."—East and West News.

That Caught Her.

Mrs. Newcomb—Good morning. Is this Miss Wise's private academy? Mrs. Binks (hotly)—No; it is not. This is a private house, and these are my own children. Mrs. Newcomb (hastily)—Why, I thought it must be a school, because the children looked so educated and scholarly and—and refined, you know. Mrs. Binks (genially)—Oh, yes, of course. Come in and sit down. Lucy, call your six brothers and five sisters and introduce them to the lady while I just put on my hat to show her where Miss Wise's school is.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

DR. LOUGHRAN HAD APPENDICITIS

Dr. E. D. B. Loughran, who left town a short time ago for a hunting trip in the Canadian woods, was suddenly taken ill with appendicitis, 60 miles away from a railroad. He was hurried to New York where he was operated upon by Dr. Samuel Lloyd. He is recovering nicely from the operation but will probably be away from his office for two weeks.

PHOENICIA.

Phoenicia, Nov. 3.—Lizzie Niece nicely entertained a company of her young friends Saturday evening. The girls were masked in sheets and pillow cases and much fun was had to guess who was who before unmasking. Lloyd Kensy represented a burglar, John Kensy a monk, Adrian Loomis a clown, Karl Niece a darkey. Others present were Anthony and George Kirk, Kenneth Ennist, Harry Voss and Lyman Hoyt. The girls in mask were Mary and Lizzie Niece, Harriet Loomis, Helen Hill, Erline Barnes, Mary Baldwin, Anna Flemming, Verna Boice, Ella Mower, Nancy Merrihew and Marie Soules. Games were played and secrets of the future divined by a fortune teller.

Mrs Warren gave a birthday surprise party in honor of her niece, Hattie Carson. A very pleasant evening was spent and all departed wishing her many happy returns of the anniversary. Those present were Erline Barnes, Helen Hill, Harlet Loomis, Ella Mower, Verna Boice, Gladys Hilson, Helen Sickler, Amelia Lange, Ada Warren and Gertrude Short, Harry Badlwin, Kenneth Ennist, Levan Merrihew, George Foster and Anthony Kirk.

The Rev. Mr. Vaughn has purchased an automobile. We'll have to watch him cut corners.

Miss Edna Niece has returned from Lake Mohonk, where she spent the summer, and after visiting her people and friends here left for Vassar College, where she is employed.

The Rev. Mr Cranston of Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, Kingston, will preach here Sunday evening.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. B. Cudney.

Levan Merrihew is ill of tonsilitis. H. Ennist is improving.

A Unitarian thinks faith must not be used but we bet he has considerable of it about him when he goes deer hunting.

What effect would it have if some one should go to the woods with a bass horn or a cornet and play "Elijah?" What effect on the birds, to say nothing of the deer?

Lorin Boice has gone to Connecticut.

A. Longyear and family have moved back from Hudson.

Mary Niece entertained Wednesday evening Karl and Lizzie Niece, Adrian and Harriet Loomis. Judging from the candy and sugar pop corn balls made they had a real "sweet" time.

The League business and social meeting will be held Friday evening. The entertaining committee is Mary Niece, Esther Somerville, Mrs. Van Steenburg, Louis Gosso and Lydia White.

The Rev. Nathan North of Rochester is visiting his brother, C. North, at A. P. Loomis's. He is connected with Liberty Mission in Rochester where a grand work is wrought for the down-and-outs.

Through the courtesy of Mr and Mrs. Lange, the entertaining committee for the League to entertain the district convention of the Epworth League had the use of their house, The Waldorf, to serve the meals. The convenience of it and the size made it very acceptable for this purpose and the committee and the church ladies outside appreciate the service of it.

Miss Marie, a popular young lady of the place, will spend the winter in the city. She is an active League worker and a member of the choir and will be missed from the branches here as well as in the place.

F. Kelsey is employed at Kingston and will soon move his family.

Mr Short has taken the sextonship since Mr. Kelsey is away.

The wet weather must have caused ticks to infest the partridge brood and kill them.

The Ladies' Aid of the M. E. Church will elect its officers Thursday.

A straw load went to Mt. Pleasant to attend the Hallowe'en party there. A jolly time going and coming and a jolly time there, is the report of the young people.

Hunters are here galore. Reports come in of deer and no deer so we have to wait until we see the real goods.

Since October first even Lawyer Dibble was seen giving a pail of water to his auto.

Quite a number attended the street meeting held by the adjutant of the Salvation Army, assistants were with him. The singing was very nice. The statements given on the Prohibition question were excellent and facts that no one would try to dispute. The difference between wet and dry goods was a good point as also the proper food use of our grain instead of in a drink, causing such a fearful outcome.

Energetic Wampsville Women.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Utica, Nov. 3.—Women residing near the village of Wampsville, in Madison county, disgusted by the condition of one of the principal highways in that section, set to work to improve the road and today completed the task, filling all the ruts with gravel and rounding up the shoulders of the highway. Seven farm teams were available and these were put to work hauling the gravel from about a mile distant. Women drove the teams and wielded shovels in man fashion. All the women engaged are active suffragists.

Chicken Supper at Modena.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Modena M. E. Church will give a chicken supper and entertainment on Friday evening, November 10, in the church. Supper will be served from 6 to 8 o'clock. A nominal admission will include both supper and entertainment. The committee in charge is arranging a fine program, and the ladies of the church have an established reputation for their cooking.

POULTRY PICKINGS.

Fall is the easiest time to get the advantage in the battle against mites.

The gray poultry mite is commonest in dark, damp, dirty poultry houses, where it thrives upon filth. Sunshine, ventilation and cleanliness are the remedies.

Keeping surplus cockerels and old male birds longer than is actually necessary is a waste.

Lack of cleanliness causes a terrible amount of waste, making degenerate stock and poorly grown chickens.

Almost every household throws away enough table scraps to feed a small flock of hens.

GREEN FEED FOR THE POULTRY IN WINTER

About the only hardy crop that can be grown on poultry ranges for the purpose of furnishing green food during the winter is rye, writes H. E. Eswine in the Philadelphia Press. A patch of rye near the poultry house will be a partial solution of the green food problem. In favorable weather the fowls may be allowed to pasture on the rye. This, however, will prove an uncertain single source of green food, for there will be some days when the weather will not permit the birds to be out of doors. For such times it will be necessary to have some other source of green food.

One of the best for this purpose is the common stock beet or mangel. More green food can be grown on a given area when planted to this crop than any other. A small space will grow enough for an entire winter. Where only a few hens are kept the roots may be cut in two and each half hung on a nail within reach of the hens. They will help themselves without further trouble. For large flocks it is best to cut the beets into ribbons with a machine made for the purpose rather than slicing them, thus enabling them to be eaten much more readily.

Sprouted oats is another satisfactory source of green food. Oats may be sprouted in the following manner: Place six quarts of heavy oats in a ten quart bucket. Fill the bucket with warm water. (Do not use hot water.) Ten drops of formalin added to the water will prevent mold. Let the bucket stand in a warm room for forty-eight hours. By the end of that time the oats will have soaked up all the water. Then spread the oats in trays.

These trays ought to have a depth of about two inches. They may be made of wood with cracks in the bottom to let out the water, or better yet, make them of galvanized iron with perforated bottom. The oats should be about one inch or less in depth. These trays should be placed in a rack or they may be placed on the floor in the furnace room or any other well ventilated place having a temperature of 60 degrees F. or above. The room should be light so as to give a green color to the oats. Sprinkle the oats well at least once a day with warm water. In from seven to ten days, depending on the temperature, the oats will be from four to six inches high.

It is best to feed at this time, as the growing plants have used up all the plant food stored in the grain and will then be in their best condition. Ordinarily as much oats as grows on one square inch is sufficient for one hen per day. It is best to provide it at noon in troughs provided for that purpose.

The Rouen duck is the favorite in France, where it is highly prized both as an egg producer and as a market fowl. It has a long, deep body, close fibered flesh of fine flavor, the mature drake weighing about nine pounds. Its plumage is much like the wild mallard, of which it is considered a descendant. The birds here pictured are a Peking duck and a Rouen drake, the Rouen being distinguished by the ring around its neck.

Corn Produces Eggs.

Corn is an excellent poultry food. A few years ago poultry writers generally advised poultrymen not to feed corn to laying hens. Chemical analysis has shown it to contain more fat forming elements than wheat, and on this account it became very unpopular, and higher priced wheat was fed in its place. Later, however, experiment stations in actual feeding tests showed it to be the equal of wheat when fed in proper combinations. The Massachusetts station secured as good if not better results in egg yield from corn as from wheat.

DESTROYING MOSQUITOES.

Common Kerosene of a Low Grade the Best Exterminator.

Next to draining, the best way to abolish mosquito breeding places is to treat the water so as to kill the mosquito larvae. While many substances have been tried for this purpose, nothing has given such good results as petroleum, according to experts of the United States department of agriculture. Common kerosene of low grade is most satisfactory as regards efficiency and price.

It has been found that spraying with a portable pump is the best way to use oil, says Popular Science. Small ponds, however, can be sprinkled out of an ordinary watering pot with a hose nozzle, or, for that matter, pouring out of a dipper or cup will be satisfactory. In larger ponds pumps with a straight nozzle may be used. A straight stream will sink and then rise, and the oil will spread until the whole surface of the water can be covered without waste.

In choosing the grade of oil to be used two factors must be considered—it should spread rapidly and should not evaporate too quickly. Heavier grades of oil will cling together in spots, and the coating will be necessarily thick. It has been found that one ounce of kerosene is sufficient to cover fifteen square feet of surface, and in the absence of wind such a film will remain persistent for ten days. Even after the iridescent scum apparently disappears there is still an odor of kerosene about the water. A mixture of crude oil and kerosene has been found to be effective in killing mosquito larvae. It has one advantage over pure kerosene in that it does not evaporate so quickly.

Special attention should be paid to little pockets of water that form around the edges of ponds, for it is in such places where the water is not disturbed by wind or otherwise that the larvae breed in greatest numbers. Larvae do not breed in open stretches of water where the surface is rippled by the wind.

In the fight against the mosquito in Panama the government experts found that a larvicide composed of carbolic acid, rosin and caustic soda was very effective, and thousands of gallons of it were used.

THE COST OF BAD ROADS.

In an address before a convention of highway officials held recently in Washington the secretary of agriculture said:

"I need not emphasize before you the importance of good roads. Most intelligent people who think about good roads know that they are essential to comfortable living, essential to proper community development, especially to the development of rural life, to efficient production and orderly marketing of farm products, to schools and to the development of a satisfactory rural life.

"Many people, however, do not appreciate this. I have occasionally met road officers who, when the importance of good roads was emphasized, have said, 'Yes, but they cost so much.' Apparently they have not thought how much more bad roads cost, not only in dollars and cents, but also in all those indirect ways for which one can make no definite calculation."

How to Mix Plain Boiled Starch and Gum Arabic Water.

This is the way to make plain boiled starch:

Allow two tablespoonfuls of starch to a gallon of water. Wet the starch with cold water until it is of the consistency of cream. Then pour over it the water, which is bubbling. Stir constantly until smooth and boil for five minutes. Add an inch of candle—to a gallon—or a tablespoonful of lard to give a very smooth starch.

This is the foundation for all starching, excepting that done with uncooked starch.

If a very stiff starch is desired a tablespoonful of gum arabic water to a quart of starch gives good results.

To prepare gum arabic water pour two cupfuls of boiling water over a quarter of a pound of gum arabic. When the gum is dissolved strain the solution into a bottle, cork and keep on hand for use in the laundry.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swarthout, at 102 Cedar street, was the scene of a very pretty party on Thursday, Nov. 2, given in honor of their daughter Ruth who celebrated her fourth birthday. Covers were laid for 14 little guests. A beautiful ornamented birthday cake bearing a horse shoe and four lighted candles was the center piece. Favors consisted of miniature, Hallowe'en baskets, filled with candy. The home was very prettily decorated with crepe paper streamers and bells. The children present were Minnie and Katherine O'Mara, Margaret and Agnes Coffey, Helen Dunnigan, Margaret Zelift, Helen Short, Edmund Burke, Walter Van Buren, George Boss, Raymond Coffey, David and Daniel Dee and Ruth Swarthout. After refreshments were served all took part in a jolly peanut hunt. The prize was given for the most peanuts to Agnes Coffey, which was a painting outfit and for the tot that got none a tiny little Hallowe'en witch.

Another Evening With the Artists.

So much interest is being shown in the art exhibit being held at Wiltwyck Inn by Dewing Woodward and Louise Johnson of the Blue Dome Fellowship, that the artists have kindly arranged to keep the exhibit open to the public on Saturday evening. Furthermore, many of our busy men have asked for the opportunity to view the pictures by daylight, and have asked that the pictures be exhibited on Sunday afternoon. This request, too, has been granted. All men of the community are especially invited to avail themselves of both of these special showings of the charming paintings and portraits. Several new canvases have been added since the opening of this temporary studio among the very latest being one of the treefold portraits of Poultney Bigelow The exhibit will not be open after Sunday afternoon.

D. A. R. Hear Interesting Paper.

The regular meeting of Wiltwyck Chapter, D A R., which was held at the Chapter House on Thursday afternoon, proved to be especially interesting because of the paper read and the guests present.

The historical events which have occurred during the month of November, as recounted by the registrar were indeed worthy of note.

The program for the afternoon was in charge of Mrs G. D. B Hasbrouck and Mrs Charles Tappen, who introduced Miss Mary Jansen DuBois whose paper was entitled, "The Daguerreotype Lady." It proved to be a most charming sketch of the women of the early Victorian period. She was found to be quite as delightful as she looked when one opened the embossed covers of the daguerreotype; "genteel," and in many ways very dissimilar to her daughters of today To the latter she seemed to have many foibles and weaknesses, yet she also possessed a fineness and firmness of character when occasion demanded The paper was greatly enjoyed by all present as was the letter received from a Swiss soldier at the front in the battle of the Somme, received by Mrs. Jessie Preston in acknowledgement of a comfort kit sent abroad from those which the chapter forwarded.

The regent, Mrs Philip Elting, then introduced the following guests Miss Ida Kimble, the daughter of a real Daughter of the American Revolution; Mrs Shull of the Washington D. C Chapter, Mrs. Hutchins of Litchfield, Conn , Mrs Rose of the Washington Heights Chapter, New York city and Mrs. Decker, a member at large Each of the guests spoke briefly paying their compliments to the entertaining chapter, and extending the greetings from their home chapters The meeting was brought to a close with the serving of refreshments, the hostesses being Mrs Westervelt Mrs. John Wolsey and Mrs. Ogden Winne.

must be founded on the cornerstone of self-respect and respect for the rights of others, and any peace that is without a cornerstone of justice, whose foundations are in the sand instead of upon solid principle, is not a lasting peace, and a peace so procured will not be a protection to the American citizen abroad. It is only peace founded on right principles under which Americans traveling in foreign lands, as tradesmen, salesmen, engineers, merchants, and in the ordinary walks of life, can secure protection for their lives and property, because the foundation of such protection rests on the respect of other nations for us.

"There is no use," he said, "in talking of the extension of American trade abroad and of the opportunities which the coming years present for energetic young American men to go abroad unless they have the protection of the United States behind them.

"That does not mean force, it does not mean either a truculent or a blustering attitude. We have in society of every day, in our ordinary every-day life a manifestation of a peaceful community, but behind that peaceful condition is the sanction of the force of society, and because of that peaceful force which is the power behind our civilization we will go peacefully about our business.

"When our young American men go abroad—carrying here the best genius of the world, or there the product of American labor, if he goes where revolutions are strife, where revolutions may be born over night, what respect may we expect to be shown to our country, how can we expect the young men of America to go ahead unless we have it unmistakably understood throughout the world that we do not consider it a reproach to be called an American citizen. (Prolonged applause). We can have no expansion of American trade if the American flag is to mean only an invitation to go home. (Applause).

"The foundation for a policy to protect the American citizen is a policy not of war but of peace. In considering these matters we must take account of our own conditions.

"We have today a prosperity based on and largely due to the European war. We all know these conditions. Does anyone say that we are prosperous because of war munitions only? The answer is simple. Our exports in two years have increased by nearly two billions of dollars, but only a small percentage related to the export of ammunition. How can our prosperity be explained then? We know that on the other side a great host has been withdrawn from their usual occupations, called to the defense of their countries, and as long as war lasts, withdrawn from the productive pursuits of society, withdrawn from the creative world of industrial activity.

"That condition has affected our own trade and our own industries. It has created a market for American products to take the place of those manufactured there, it has created an extra demand for American labor; labor has been employed to the best advantage and has created prosperity, and has created a need in various lines in which we as a country were not experienced.

"All the United States felt this stimulus to our activities. It is a very unwholesome stimulus because it breeds hopes which are destined to be disappointed; it is an unwholesome stimulus because it breeds contentment with a condition which is sure to be shattered. When this demand created by the European war is stopped then those conditions will stop. In other words, when this war stops and the war orders springing from it end, you can see a greatly reduced industrial activity in this country, because then instead of having millions of men on the other side fighting, they will be producing.

"Instead of having the advantage of the absence of competition, there will be a very keen competition, and of course, the conditions in Europe are well known to every student of affairs. A man must be very self-deceived who would suppose that, because of the terrible strain of the war, Europe has lost its power effectively to compete with the United States. Even with respect to men, there would be no net loss as compared with the labor available at the beginning of war, because those who have come to the industrial age in the meantime exceed in numbers those whose lives have been lost, who have been permanently disabled. The statisticians tell us that if we had peace today, there would be more men available in the warring nations for industry than were available in 1914, not, of course, as many as would have been available now had it not been for the war, but more than were available in 1914, because the net increase exceeds the losses of the war. So far as industrial plants are concerned, for the most part, they have been untouched by the war. There is a very small area in which they have been affected. They have not been affected at all in Great Britain or in the Central Powers or in Russia or in Italy. There have been new plants created; there have been new plants created that can be rapidly turned into productivity and peace; and we have a splendid energy and discipline behind the horrible spectacle of war.

"Do not be so engrossed if you are considering our economic problems, with the terrible carnage and waste that is indicated in the actual conflict, that you fail to take note of the powerful industrial organization that is going on in every one of these great countries. We shall have a very keen competition at the close of the war. Undoubtedly every one of those nations will proceed to protect her own markets, her own manufactures, her own industries, and seek to send the surplus goods elsewhere. Those goods will seek our markets. We have accumulated a great store of gold during this war. Of course, production will be increased abroad to the very greatest extent in order that goods produced there may be sold here. We are told when we speak of these things that America should increase her efficiency. Of course America should increase her efficiency. (Applause).

"We are told that we ought to rival in our strength, in our discipline, in our alertness and in our methods the methods that are adopted abroad. I agree, so we should. We have had on the other side as was said the other day by Mr. Hurley of the Federal Trade Commission, Great Britain making more industrial progress in the last 30 months than in the last 30 years. They have learned co-operation, and very high standards of efficiency, the standards of efficiency on the continent are today even higher than they were before. We want to emulate the standards, but when you have got America just as efficient as any nation abroad, when we have got organization and method just as perfect here as anywhere else, you have still got the question of what you are going to do when products that are made cheaper on the other side than they can be made here, because of the difference in our wage-scale. When those products come here, one of two things must happen. Either they will be sold in the American market to the preference of our products, or American wages will have to be reduced. That is a plain proposition. We shall not only have the decrease in opportunities incident to the decrease in the demand specially created by the war, but we will have this keenness of competition to which I have referred. Now, we must deal with this sanely and intelligently. What do our opponents propose? They in the first place propose what they call an anti-dumping clause in the revenue bill.

"I have already considered that legislation. I know something about statutes, and I do not think that statute is much better for practical purposes than the paper that it is written on; and the reason is this—It is full of qualifying clauses, it is full of provisos—of things that must be proved of intent, that it will not reach a practical case to which apparently it is intended to apply. It is filled with words that eat the heart out of the statute; and I do not think there will be a prosecution, a successful prosecution, under it.

"They tell us they have provided a tariff commission. The party I represent believes in a tariff commission. I believe in it also. And the party, the Republican party, believed in it first. This proposition of a tariff commission is a leaf out of our own brook, and I do not object to it, of course, because of that, but I welcome it. We want every expert agency we can get for obtaining information. We want to proceed on the very best knowledge of the facts that we can obtain. We want to know what we are doing and to deal with these intricate subjects in the most successful and intelligent manner. But our opponents do not tell us what is more important than all they have said, namely, they do not tells what the principle is upon which they propose to act. They sometimes act as if they thought or were willing to have other people think, that the tariff commission was going to pass bills. A tariff commission cannot pass any bills. Of course under our system of government you could not give power to any such commission to pass bills. It is congress that has the sole power to legislate, and it is the majority in congress that must determine the policy you will have. What is the principle for which our opponents stand? Do they stand for the protective principle? They told us four years ago it was unconstitutional.

"They then stated a principle to which they have adhered through the generations. It has been their favored principle, the principle of a tariff for revenue only. They told us they were going to apply that principle; they did apply it in the Underwood bill. They say in their present platform that they have embodied the principle to which they adhered in the Underwood bill. Now, we know what that bill meant. Instead of business being what they promised, the bill did not do as they said it would do. They said the bill would reduce the cost of living, increase the opportunities of employment, and provide for revenue. It provided a deficit which decreased the opportunities of employment, and it did not touch the cost of living, which continued nevertheless to increase. We know what their policy is, for they refer to the Underwood bill, and I say in perfect courtesy and good humor, but nevertheless directly, that if our opponents do not stand for the principle of a tariff for revenue only, they haven't got any principle at all, so far as the tariff is concerned. (Great applause.)

"And when they talk of the tariff commission I would like to go a little deeper and find out what they are going to do with the report of a tariff commission. The leaders in the senate and the house do not exhibit any desire to enforce the protective principle. Only a little while ago, before the adjournment of congress, the leader in the house declared emphatically his adherence to the old Democratic principle of a tariff for revenue only. I do not quarrel with that—I admire his fidelity to his convictions, I admire his candor in stating that—but I simply say that is not the American policy, and it is not fitted to the needs of American life, and after the war you cannot run this country without protection for American industry being first laid as a proper basis. (Applause.)

"I propose that we use that tariff commission. That we develop every opportunity for getting accurate information, and then we proceed upon the principle which the Republican Party has stood for through which our industries have been expanded, a principle which all the nations abroad are taking up and applying themselves—even Great Britain—a principle which we shall need to apply in these coming days. Our opponents made many promises four years ago. They told us then with regard to economic problems, of the wonderful opportunities that they were going to give to American business. We know what actually followed. I do not mean that they were insincere, I simply mean that what they think fitted American life does not work with it. You know what happened after the Underwood Bill passed. We had unemployment on a great scale in this country. We are told, is not America naturally well-situated, has not she a strong people of great energy fitted to develop the wonderful natural resources here existing?

"The other day I was in Gary, Indiana. You know of the extraordinary development of that place. In ten years it went up as though it were a creature of the dreams and stories of the Arabian Nights. They had unexampled bases of production, with great plants, alert and skillful workmen, and yet 22 months ago there were souphouses in Gary. Is there any place better developed along industrial lines than Pittsburgh? Yet the mayor of Pittsburgh told me the other day, 22 months ago the municipality was raising $300,000 to provide part time work for men who could not get any jobs. There were over 1,000,000 out of employment in the metal trades.

"We must not suppose that the great drive of enterprise created by the European war will continue to give us the activity we now enjoy after the war is over. You remember quite vividly what happened to our industrial enterprises because of the European war, but we will come very swiftly to our senses when this war stopss. We have got then to have sound and intelligent policies to conserve our industries, and I propose not that we create special opportunities for the few at the expense of the many, but that we go ahead using wisely governmental power to the end that we may give opportunities for American labor and maintain the scale of American wages. (Great applause.) And when I speak of these things I have the great object of our society in view. For we are organized under free institutions, not for the purpose of securing little isles of safety for the elect, not for the purpose of giving a special privileges to a few exceptionally talented. We are organized under our free institutions to give the largest possible prosperity to the great masses of the plain people of the country, and it is their prosperity that I am interested in. (Great applause.) Not in the prosperity if the few at the expense of the many. I want to have a basis for our improvement; I want to have a basis for our progress. There is no use getting so far up in the air with eloquence that we forget what we have to build on. We will have no foundation at all, but simply a house on the sand which cannot last if we do not secure the stability of enterprise; if we do not protect American industry; if we do not conserve American markets for American protection.

"That is the policy by which we will get the foundation of prosperity upon which we can build the structure in which labor can live contentedly because of the just treatment which it has. I want to see the best wages paid that an industry can pay. I want to see proper hours of labor.

"I am not opposed to the principle of the eight-hour work-day. I believe in the principle of an eight-hour work-day. That principle has to do with the restriction of strain and the giving of an opportunity for a broader and richer life because of the resources of leisure. We want to have a contented and wholesome and happy people; efficient because contented and happy. Whether you can apply that principle in any given industry at any given time depends on the condition of the industry at that time.

"These are practical questions to be decided in a practical way, on consideration of the particular facts of the case. What I am opposed to is government by holdup. I am opposed to passing out gold-bricks to labor. I am opposed to dealing with fractions and then claiming you are dealing with the whole body of toil. I want everyone to get a square deal because we act on inquiry and on the facts, and not for this set against that set, or this group against that group, but because we are considering the interests of all.

"I shall examine the very last fact in any grievance which comes before me, and I will act on what I believe to be the justice of the case without regard to the temporary popularity of it. I believe I have a right to say I will do that, as that has been my object in all of my public career and I won't budge an inch under pressure or force.

"We have a great opportunity in this country. We are going to have, as I have said, a very keen commercial rivalry, but we have a great opportunity, because of the intelligence of our manhood, because of our natural resources, because of American push and drive. Let us conserve it. Let us have the American name honored throughout the world. Let us have a basis that will endure after the European war is over. Let us have a broad vision which takes into account all the interests of the people. Let us have a sincere love of the principle of free institutions, and then we will go forward and have America first and America efficient." (Applause.)

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 3.—There was the usual opening gains in a number of issues, but after the first few minutes stocks were in supply at concessions, and a reaction was in order. Steel Common opened ¼ higher at 120⅞, and then declined to 119¾. Utah opened at an advance of ½ at 109½, and then declined to 108¾. Similar advances followed by reactions were noted in nearly all the active issues. Industrial Alcohol continued under pressure, yielding 1⅜ to 141⅛, and Cuba Cane Sugar opened ¼ higher at 73, and then declined to 71⅝. Texas Pacific was in good demand, selling at 19, the highest price touched in a long period.

The most important feature of the trading in the forenoon was the increased demand for stocks, without regard to price movements. Steel Common after declining from 120⅞ to 119¾, quickly rallied to 120⅝. Utah, which declined from 109½ to 108¾, rallied again and sold up to 110. Sloss-Sheffield advanced 4¾ points to 70. Central Leather rose to a new high record of 99¾. Ontario and Western sold up to 32, the highest price touched by that stock this year. Columbia Gas gained 2⅛ to 42. Bethlehem Steel made a new high record, advancing 5 points to 675. Money loaning at 2½ per cent.

The only prominent feature of the afternoon was the renewed buying of Utah Copper, which carried that stock up over 3 points, to 113, a new high record, Steel Common showed a stronger tone, rallying ¾ to 120½, and American Can moved up 1 point to 64. Trading in the remainder of the list was without feature.

The final tone was strong. Utah Copper again lifted its high record in the late trading, advances to 113½ being noted. Movements in most of the other issues were irregular, with the exception of the coper stocks, which made fractional gains. Steel Comon was in fair demand above 120. Government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds strong.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke).

New York, Nov. 3.—Didja ever notice that Freddie Welsh rarely outpoints a foe the first time he meets him—and that he rarely fails to do it in the second whirl?

The first time Charlie White ran afoul of the lightweight champion he looked awfully good—and Welsh not so good.

"If Charlie ever gets another crack at the Welsh baby the lightweight crown will be his'n," murmured White's fond and loving friends.

White has had about three chances since then and Welsh has been his absolute master on each of those occasions.

Benny Leonard took on Welsh in New York late in the spring. He rushed right in and whaled Welsh unmercifully. He fought like a champion; Welsh like a dub. And so they were rematched and Leonard went into the fracas a favorite in the betting. Gotham's vast East Side staked its race on Benny to win—and Benny, oi yoi, what a beating he did get.

Shrewdness of Welsh.

Peer back through Welsh's record and you will find the same condition existing almost invariably. In the majority of his no-decision bouts, the Briton always has looked like a "has been" in his inaugural fights against new rivals—and resembled something vastly different on the second go with the same man.

Why is it? Shrewdness, Oscar; that's the reason. Welsh is always looking to the future. In his first run-in with any gent of the padded mit, Frederick is cautious. He fights almost wholly on the defensive. Welsh is letting the other goafer show everything he has while he is concealing all his tricks and punches.

And so, the natives, always keen about seeing a champ dethroned, whoop it up for another battle. That's just what Frederick wants. The oftener he fights, the fatter the bankroll. So another match is made and the youth who outpointed Welsh in the initial affair, promptly rushes in and—gets a terrible surprise.

He finds himself facing a different Welsh; a vastly different fighter. He is confronted with a real champion; one who suddenly has become offensive; one who beats him to every punch; a champion who knows his every trick, his every weakness; a fighter who is his master throughout.

That's right; if Frederick beat up his man in the first scrap there wouldn't be a second. And it's those second ones that always draw biggest and get for Welsh the bulkiest guarantee.

Dundee vs. Kilbane.

Promoting ginks in the Gotham district are trying to sic Messrs. Kilbane and Dundee upon each other. The price of johnnies are willing—for a price. And, as Bill Shakefewspears said: "There's the rub."

Kilbane wants a sum equivalent to a large portion of John D.'s fortune; Dundee wants the crown jewels of Italy. And there you are—or they are.

Another fight between the two would be worth the price of admission, provided C. Hercules Ebbets didn't stage the bout. Twice before have they clashed, in the days when Dundee was battling in the feather division. The first scrap was in New York, September 4, 1912, over the 10 round route, with Kilbane having a shade at the conclusion.

The second meeting caused quite a stir. It happened in San Francisco on April 29, 1913. After 20 rounds of slam-bang work, the referee called it a draw, while huge gobs of spectators rose right up and shrieked denunciations. They were of the opinion that the decision—and with it the title—should have gone to Dundee. The Italian scrapper and his manager thought so, too, and wailed loudly—but in vain.

Kilbane still is a legitimate featherweight, while Dundee has grown into a lightweight. But Kilbane announces:

"I don't care what Dundee weighs; I'll take him on if I get the price."

RECORDER LANG HAS A KNOTTY PROBLEM

Third Avenue Neighbors Sign a Peace Bond to Keep the Peace For One Year—First to Quarrel to Pay $25.

Recorder Lang settled a knotty problem in recorder's court this morning when Mrs. Michael Buboltz and Mrs. Katie Van Steenburgh, neighbors on Third avenue, both agreed to sign a peace bond. The court drew up the bond which was signed by both women. It provides that the two women shall leave each other alone for a period of one year. Recorder Lang informed them that the penalty attached to the first one who quarreled with the other would be a fine of $25.

Mrs. Buboltz was arrested a few days ago on the complaint of Mrs. Van Steenburgh on the grounds that she had called her vile names. The case was adjourned until this morning when it was settled as stated.

Mrs. Buboltz is the mother of five small children, the youngest a nursling baby. Both she and her husband have been in trouble a number of times.

It is now hoped that the dove of peace may brood undisturbed in that particular vicinity of Third avenue.

UPTOWN YOUNG MEN HAVE A $5 JAG

Early this morning Policeman Fout rounded up three young men on a charge of public intoxication and locked them up in the county jail until it was time for them to be arraigned before Recorder Lang. The three men gave their names and ages to the police as James J. O'Neil, 24 years, Tobias Peppard, 25 years, and John Rowland, 22 years. All three said they resided in the upper section of the city.

The three were somewhat sobered when brought into court and said they were employed at the powder works. The charge lodged against them by Officer Fout was that they had been drinking and had broken a bottle on the sidewalk, and had broken a cellar window in the Rose, Gorman & Rose store on North Front street, and that they had used loud, profane and indecent language when told to move on and had threatened Nightwatchman DeGraff.

All three pleaded guilty to drinking, but said they had broken no windows.

They were fined $5 each by Recorder Lang.

The broken bottle and another large quart bottle were produced in court by the police. The unbroken bottle appeared to contain a spoonful of hard cider.

The Rowland arrested is not a member of the Rowland family on Spring street, and as his name is not in the city directory, it would not be at all surprising that he gave a name not his own.

TOPICS NEW YORK IS TALKING ABOUT

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Nov. 3.—No man need be in the slightest doubt what Charles Evans Hughes stands for. Here is his platform in his own words:

"You ask what road I propose to travel? These are the milestones which mark it.

"An executive responsible to the whole nation.

"A cabinet chosen from the ablest Americans.

"A foreign policy that stands courteously but firmly for American rights.

"A flag that protects the American in his lawful rights wherever his legitimate business may take him.

"A preparation for trade competition which shall protect all groups of American workmen.

"A government oversight of business which will fearlessly eliminate abuses, but will act on the assumption that the average business man is honest.

"And finally a domestic policy which looks to industrial peace, and to sound and permanent prosperity based upon the development of American trade and the building up of American industries.

"We Americans are in one boat. You cannot strike a blow at one group without injury to all. Common justice and fair play will settle our difficulties if suspicion and bitterness are let alone. These are the principles by which I propose to be guided."

Wilson-Lane Farce.

The Wilson-Lane farce, otherwise known as the Mexican Conference, gives evidence of coming to an abrupt end. The Mexican delegates were asked to adjourn for ten days, so as to avoid any disagreement before the election, but they refused. Instead they pointed out that the conference was serving no good purpose, that the Wilson administration was guilty of positively bad faith, that they entered the conference on an agreement that it was to take up immediately the withdrawal of American troops from Mexican territory; that instead of so doing, the proceedings have been dragged out with academic discussions which led nowhere and it obviously had been thus ineffectively prolonged to serve the political ends of President Wilson. The Mexican delegates intimated that they were unwilling longer thus to be made the plaything of Democratic politics. When asked for some idea of what the conference had accomplished during its ten weeks' sessions, Secretary Lane replied, "I will try to think up something." It is generally believed that if the Mexicans can be persuaded to adjourn until after election day, the conference will then break up for good, having served the whole purpose for which it was instituted, the deception of some few voters regarding the Mexican muddle.

Wilson Desperate.

President Wilson's latest stumping tour has not only afforded him no encouragement but appears to have made him bitter and desperate. He scored as disloyal all who do not support him or who criticise his foreign policies and denounced them as unpatriotic. Mr. Wilson completely ignored the constant reference to his alleged achievements in the field of foreign relations in the Democratic Text Book and the claims put forth on all sides by his political managers. He even forgot, apparently, his own flagrantly unjust charge that the election of Mr. Hughes would plunge this country into war. The most valiant efforts have been put forth to induce Tammany to aid in giving Mr. Wilson a big ante-election demonstration in New York and the indications are that Tammany will do so, although at the somewhat depressing celebration of "Wilson Day" at Shadow Lawn, Chief Murphy of Tammany refused to attend. There is every indication that Hughes will carry New York state by an overwhelming majority, although Wilson will, as do practically all Democratic candidates, carry New York city proper.

Railroad Men Aroused.

Four hundred thousand railroad workers will formally petition congress, when it meets in December, to revise the Adamson law, according to Robert T. Frazier, a Tennessee Democrat who is employed by the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis Railway. Mr. Frazier says that the petition has already been signed by 200,000 railway employes, who declare the movement of which he is the head is non-political and purely economic. He says, "The Adamson law takes away the opportunity of bargaining. Both classes of employes have now lost the principle of collective bargaining, but the Brotherhood men have in return got a 25-per cent increase of wages, while we have got nothing; and no chance to get anything with this principle surrendered. Our idea is to keep out of politics but of course it cannot be denied that many of the men signing these petitions are incensed over what was done at Washington last summer."

Certain of Indiana.

Gov. Hughes has advised National Chairman Willcox that he is perfectly certain of carrying Indiana and that it is impossible for him to express his gratitude and delight over the magnificent reception he has just received in that state. He attributes the increased enthusiasm for the Republican ticket largely to the fact that the railway men and other wage earners have come to appreciate the deception involved in calling the Adamson act an "8-hour law;" to the fact that many railwaymen, including members of the brotherhoods are by no means certain that they will derive any benefit whatever from the law and fear they will be injured, as for instance, passenger trainmen who fear the law requires that they work full eight hours, regardless of the time required to make their runs, switchmen, who fear they will be able to earn only 8-hours pay with no overtime, etc. Reports from Ohio indicate the same trend of sentiment against Wilson and in favor of Hughes and there is not the slightest doubt in the minds of the Republican managers that both states will give Mr. Hughes handsome majorities.

Coming Events.

The kind of sentiment which the Wilson administration has succeeded in inspiring in foreign countries, and what this country will be confronted with when the war ends, is somewhat strikingly exemplified by the following editorial from "Italie," of Sept. 9, a newspaper published in Rome and printed three parts in French and one in English. It says, "when the war is over the Allies ought to bear in mind that America, to scoop in the almighty dollar, has sacrificed honor, principles and justice as well as the lives of her citizens, destroyed by German submarines. They have a remedy—buy no more American goods, or clap such a tax on them that they cannot run (compete?) against goods manufactured in Europe."

The Hyphen Vote.

President Wilson pretends he does not want any hyphenated vote, has denounced "hyphenates" and insulted foreign-born Americans repeatedly, but it is noteworthy that way up on the 8th floor—disconnected with the regular Democratic headquarters but in the same building—Hugh Wallace, Democratic National Committeeman from Washington, is conducting a foreign language bureau where extravagant Democratic appeals for the despised "hyphenate" votes are being turned out by the ton in nine different languages.

Twice as Much.

A sailor on being asked how he liked his bride is reported to have remarked: "Why, d'ye see, I took her for only half of me, as the parson says, but dash me if she isn't twice as much as I am. I am only a tar, and she's a tar-tar."—New York Telegraph.

Suburban Sort.

"But I thought you said your new cook was a jewel?"

"So I did."

"And yet she left the second day?"

"Yes. You see, she didn't like the kind of setting we provided for her."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

He Hadn't Forgotten.

"George, I'll bet you've forgotten what day this is."

"No; I haven't. It's either our wedding day or your birthday. It always is one or the other when you want to make a bet like that."—Detroit Free Press.
